Party Leaders Facing Battle Over Bonus And Inflation

Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars Split on Payment.

Differences Lead To Widening Rift

Patman Proposal to Be Prime Convention and Campaign Issue.

By Robert C. Albright.

Projecting the bonus issue with inflation variations headlong into the next campaign, and September veterans conventions, a widening rift between the two largest veterans organizations was climaxed last night by bitter exchanges between the two groups.

With Administration assurance of bonus right of way next session, a battle royal over the form it will take will be waged next month in New Orleans and St. Louis—convention cities, respectively, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

Concerned over inflation implications of the $2,000,000,000 Patman bonus plan, and gathering farm support for the $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, both of which were successfully smothered last session, party leaders were looking ahead for means of circumventing a deluge of new money when Congress reconvenes.

President Signs Bills.

A forerunner of the $3,000,000,000 farm mortgage refinancing measure—the Frazier-Lemke bill for a three-year farm debt moratorium—was signed by the President yesterday. At the same time, he signed the railroad retirement bill, and announced he will sign the Guffey coal bill tomorrow. The $250,000,000 tax bill and the neutrality resolution still are awaiting perfunctory signatures. Both of the bills signed yesterday, the Frazier-Lemke farm-debt moratorium and the railroad retirement law, were enacted in a more liberal form last session, but invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Opening guns in the new bonus offensive boomed yesterday when Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, charged the bonus failed last session because of the "petty selfishness" of Commander Frank N. Belgrano and John Thomas Taylor, legislative representatives of the American Legion.

In the absence of Belgrano and Taylor, both of whom are touring State legion departments whipping up support for the legion bonus stand, a spokesman of that group retorted with one word, "Bosh!"

At the same time, a tug of war developed between the two groups over credit for veterans' legislation enacted last session. Spokesmen for both groups claimed they pushed to enactment the Harrison-McCormack bill liberalizing the hospitalization laws and extending until January 2, 1940, the time within

Blaze Sweeps Awning Plant

Employe Suffers Burns in Fighting Flames; Three Alarms Sounded.

Firemen last night were battling a stubborn three-alarm blaze in the Washington Shade & Awning Co. at 1904 M street northwest. An employe of the company, Ernest Zsoldos, 27, 210 E street northwest, who discovered the flames, was burned in his efforts to halt the fire.

Zsoldos was working in the front of the three-story brick and stone building when he saw the flames in the rear. He attempted to extinguish them. The smoke and heat drove him back. He ran to a neighboring gasoline station and phoned the fire department.

When the first firemen arrived second and third alarms were sent in by Battalion Chief Hans Barker. The cause of the fire was not immediately determined. It apparently started in the second floor and progressed up into the third story.

Chattanoogan Preparedness

Mrs. J. Jett, who lives at 2619 Thirteenth street northwest and who advertised a room for rent in the Classified Columns of The Post recently, has told us a story.

It seems that a young lady from Chattanooga, Tenn., upon having been appointed to a Government position in Washington, subscribed to The Post, saw Mrs. Jett's advertisement, and rented the room from her home in Tennessee!

There's no limit to what those little Classified Ads will do.

Fight Pressed For Lindbergh Baby's Prints

Fisher Lays Evasion to Police, Insists He Has Found 'Double.'

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 29.—C. Lloyd Fisher and Vincent A. Marco, attorneys for Richard Bruno Hauptmann, issued a joint statement here today that their investigators have located a child in Long Island under circumstances indicating "there was more than a possibility it might be the missing Lindbergh baby."

Fisher came from New Jersey to confer with Mrs. Emma Gloeckner, sister of Hauptmann. He plans new legal steps to save from execution the man convicted of kidnaping Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's child.

Fisher Absent.

Fisher, absent from Marco's office when the statement was issued, said later that efforts had been made to have the Lindberghs see the Long Island child, but that they had declined. He said identification attempts would depend largely on checking of fingerprints. Otherwise, he and Marco would not amplify the following statement issued after noon today:

"Through our investigators we have succeeded in locating a child now on Long Island. Because of physical resemblances, coupled with a set of circumstances surrounding the history of the child, it is indicated to us that there is more than a possibility that it may be the missing Lindbergh child.

Prints Obtained.

"We succeeded in obtaining fingerprints of this child and then communicated with Col. Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State police, asking the colonel to furnish us with a complete set of the Lindbergh baby's fingerprints.

"He replied that there was no complete set of the Lindbergh baby's prints in existence, but only a few latent prints of a child found in the nursery room, that there was no definite information regarding whose prints these might be.

"This information was very surprising, as we knew that Dr. Hudson, fingerprint expert called in by Schwarzkopf to aid him at the time of the kidnaping, had found dozens of prints of the child in the Lind-

Woman Appears Sure To Win 'Safe' Air Derby

Akron, Aug. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Prescott, of San Diego, Calif., appeared certain to win the Los Angeles to Cleveland Ruth Chatterton "Safety" Air Derby as she winged into Akron at 4:13:09 p. m. (E. S. T.) today.

Although she was the third of the derbyists to reach Akron for the overnight stop, Mrs. Prescott was so far ahead in points that official timers said, barring accident, she will win the $2,500 prize.

Britain's Prince Henry to Wed Descendant of Walter Scott

Announcement of Gloucester's Betrothal to Lady Alice, Childhood Friend, to Leave Wales, Heir to Throne, Lone Bachelor of Royal Family.

By the United Press.

Balmoral Castle, Scotland, Aug. 29.—King George V tonight announced the engagement of his third son, Prince Henry, Duke of Gloucester, 35, to Lady Alice Christobel Montagu-Douglas-Scott, 34, direct descendant of Sir Walter Scott.

Prince Henry's marriage will leave the Prince of Wales, heir to the throne, the only unmarried child of the British sovereigns.

"It is with great pleasure the King and Queen announce the betrothal of our dearly beloved son, the Duke of Gloucester, and Lady Alice Christobel Montagu-Douglas-Scott, to which union the King has gladly given his consent," the court circular announcing the event read.

The prince—his full name is Henry William Frederick Albert—easily is the best athlete in the British royal family. A younger son, he has lived the rather dull life of a British army officer, enlivened only by sports and travel.

Handsome and mustached, he won renown at polo, steeplechasing, cross-country running and cricket.

Officially, he was entrusted only with those public functions for which the King, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York could not be spared. Included in these minor events was the coronation of the present emperor of Ethiopia.

As far back as 1923, rumor had him about to marry Lady Alice, or her sister, Lady Mary Theresa, daughters of the rich Duke of Buccleuch. They were childhood friends.

Of the King's sons either married or engaged, only the Duke of Kent, the youngest, married royalty—the Greek Princess Marina. The others chose commoners.

Lady Alice's family has been illustrious in English history since 1606. Her father, Duke of Buccleuch and of Queensberry, former captain in the royal navy, is governor of the Bank of Scotland and chairman of the board of the North British Railway.

Sir Walter Scott, warden of the West Marches (third of the name and second of the office) was the recipient of the first of the above

Flier Fails to Find Plane Lost in Alaska

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 29 (AP).—An aerial reconnaissance over the White River country, south of Dawson, Y. T., where what appeared to be four wavering smoke columns were seen Tuesday, failed today to give any clew to whereabouts of a craft carrying four persons missing since August 19.

Pilot Joe Barrows messaged from Dawson that his flight over the area was without result. He returned here and conferred with other pilots as to where to search next.

Those aboard the missing plane were Arthur F. Hines, pilot, and three passengers, Mr. and Mrs. John Lonzo and Alton Nordale, all of Fairbanks.

Cards Lose Ground to Rivals; Tigers Win to Increase Margin

National League developments yesterday saw the league-leading Cardinals lose ground to all rivals and their first-place margin over the New York Giants reduced to a game and a half.

The Cardinals alone of the first-divison clubs were beaten. The fourth-place Pirates pounded Dizzy Dean for ten hits, while Big Jim Weaver was holding the Cardinals to seven, and turned back the league leaders, 5 to 1.

Lee pitched the Cubs to an 8-2 victory over the Braves, and Castleman suffered only one bad inning in hurling the Giants to a 7-5 triumph over Brooklyn.

Thus the pennant race tightened all along the line with Giants, Cubs and Pirates gaining a full game apiece on the leaders. The standing of the leaders:

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
St. Louis	76	45	.628	...
New York	75	47	.615	1½
Chicago	77	50	.606	2
Pittsburgh	72	55	.567	7

In the American League, Detroit, playing one of the two games scheduled, overwhelmed the St. Louis Browns to extend their league lead to 9½ games over the idle Yankees. Wes Ferrell pitched Boston to a 6-2 victory over Philadelphia in the only other league game of the day. Washington was not scheduled.

4 Die, 3 Hurt As Flood Hits Parked Bus

29 Trapped When Wall of Water Swamps Car in Western Torrent.

By the Associated Press.

Willcox, Ariz., Aug. 29.—Four persons were dead and three lay injured tonight, their bodies torn and bruised after a huge motorbus had been struck by a six-foot water wall and tossed about like a cork.

The mighty flood wave raced down a slope and engulfed the bus near here last night before any of the 27 passengers and two busmen could act to save himself. The huge westbound carrier was hurled 60 feet. It lodged against a telephone pole.

Survivors told their first stories of the tragedy tonight.

They said windows were smashed and passengers pulled their way to the roof. There the trapped group sang, prayed and shouted—anxiously watching the pole holding them. Thus they waited until the surging flow receded. Railroad men rescued them.

The dead:

N. Sablin, 3945 Jackson boulevard, Chicago.
Mary Bosh, 25, Tucson, Ariz.
Reyon Bosh, 9, Tucson, Ariz.
An elderly, unidentified man.

None of the three injured persons received serious hurts. They were Mrs. Louis Kissell, of Dallas, who had a broken rib; Nathan Gold, address unknown, and Mrs. Pearl Seaback, of Oklahoma City.

Bus a Madhouse.

The bus, bound from El Paso to Tucson for the Golden Eagle line, was parked on high ground, near a railroad underpass. The driver was awaiting abatement of flood waters from the Dragoon Mountains.

A deafening roar was the only warning of disaster.

Mrs. Kissell said the passengers were sitting quietly. The driver had stepped outside to observe their situation.

Suddenly, we felt the bus floating. It veered around, like a boat," Mrs. Kissell said, "and water began pouring in.

"Someone yelled for us to stand on the seats until the windows could be broken. Everyone seemed very calm, for a moment, and then it became a madhouse."

Gilmore said Sablin apparently was drowned. The Chicagoan's body was washed nearly 3 miles.

Mary and Reyon Bosh were drowned inside the bus. The body of the fourth victim, an unidentified man, also was found inside the bus.

Blood Given Couzens After 3 Operations

Rochester, Minn., Aug. 29 (AP).—Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, was given a blood transfusion by Mayo Clinic physicians today.

Physicians said the Senator had lost considerable blood in three operations, particularly in the final one, for removal of a kidney a week ago.

They admitted disappointment over the "progress he has made in the last two days."

The Senator's blood pressure was low, the physicians said, and the transfusion was given "to further his recovery."

They said the transfusion did not mean "any immediate danger."

British Fleet Sails for Suez; Albania Fears Italian Army

Throng Cheers Warships as They Steam Away From Malta Isle.

Il Duce Fearful Of Little Entente

May Put Force Between Yugoslavia and His Own Borders.

The Crisis Abroad.

Great Britain ordered her fleet to the Suez on what was called its most important mission since the World War.

Premier Mussolini called another cabinet meeting for September 14, indicating that date may prove the climax in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

London determined to follow its original firm course of action at the League council session September 4. Il Duce's warning was described as just another public statement in informed quarters.

By the United Press.

Valetta, Malta, Aug. 29.—The Mediterranean tonight became a center of warlike activity, second only to the East African frontiers, when Britain's mighty Mediterranean fleet sailed for Suez, key to Italy's route to Ethiopia.

Departure of the warships—defenders of Britain's boast that she rules the seas—was accompanied by reports Premier Benito Mussolini plans a military occupation of Albania to protect his frontiers against the Little Entente.

Other reports said Italy is fortifying Saseno Island, in the Bay of Avlona, in line with her policy to execute her Ethiopian policies alone against a challenging world.

Throngs See Fleet.

Huge throngs lined the historic bastions surrounding Grand Harbor to watch departure of the fleet on the most important mission Britain has assigned to her naval forces since the World War.

Bands blared aboard the larger vessel during exchanges of salutes fired from each ship as it left the harbor to join the armada at sea. The fleet, bathed in sunshine, was impressive.

The main fleet moved ahead in a long line. The third and fourth squadrons were escorted by destroyer flotillas, zig-zagging through white foam as convoys to the potent battleship Resolution, which carried the flag of Admiral Sir William Wordsworth Fisher.

The battleships Revenge and Valiant followed. Flags of vice admirals fluttered from them.

Planes on Ships.

Behind the battleships steamed the first cruiser squadron—the London, Devonshire and Shropshire. It was followed by the third cruiser squadron—the Delhi, Despatch and Durban.

The Valiant and all ships in the first cruiser squadron were equipped with airplanes—the best machines in the British naval air forces. The first squadron of destroyers and the first squadron of submarines also left with the fleet. After maneuvers at sea they will return to base at Malta, while the fleet hovers off the gateway to the route to India.

The Mediterranean's importance, emphasized by British fleet activities, was enhanced by reports Italy is strengthening her own position here.

Fear Yugoslavia.

At Athens the newspaper Patris asserted Italy intends military occupation of Albania as a precaution against a possible attack from Yugoslavia, one of her severest critics. Reports to Patris from the Greek and Albanian frontiers said Italian arms, munitions and officers recently were transferred secretly to the Albanian coast line.

Although ruled by King Zog from Tirana, Albania is virtually an Italian protectorate.

Reports to the Exchange Telegraph Agency, London, said also that Italy is fortifying Albanian shores. Tirana dispatches said Italian munitions and building materials have ben sent to Saseno Island in Avlona Bay. Italian officers have spent several weeks surveying the island.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tazewell, Va., Aug. 29.—E. G. Herman contended the shooting was accidental.

Adolphus Hall yesterday was found guilty of maliciously wounding Fred Lamber, and the jury recommended a sentence of 12 months in jail. Claude Lambert and Bill Lovell, charged with robbing the Seyler Lumber Co. commissary at Bluefield, also were sentenced to 12 months each.

Tragedy Likened To Albert's Death

Couple Were On Way to Climb Mountains in Switzerland.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Kussnacht, Switzerland, Aug. 29. Beloved young Queen Astrid of the Belgians met a violent death while on her vacation today, as did her father-in-law, King Albert, 18 months ago.

The 29-year-old mother of three children was injured fatally when thrown from a car which King Leopold, her husband, was driving. She died in his arms on the roadside, while a village priest gave extreme unction.

King Leopold was cut on the head. Although he was severely affected by nervous shock and was grief-stricken, doctors said he was in no danger.

Official Probe Planned.

Swiss authorities announced an official inquiry into the accident would be made.

The body of the queen was placed in a casket and taken to her Swiss villa. From there tonight Leopold began the sorrowful journey with it back home, aboard a special train from Lucerne.

Premier Paul van Zeeland, who flew to Lucerne, was aboard the train. It left for Brussels at 10:15 p. m. (5:15 p. m. Eastern standard time).

Sister Brun, a nurse at the Santa Ana Hospital who prepared the queen's body for burial, said "her face suffered hardly any disfigurement at all.

"She has a slight bruise under her chin," she said. "Otherwise she remains as beautiful in death as she was before the tragedy. Her eyes were still clear before they were closed."

On Climbing Trip.

The royal couple were on their way to do some mountain climbing—the same sport in which Albert was killed. The queen was dressed in sports clothes, while Leopold wore an Alpine costume and hobnailed boots.

Members of the royal household stood watch over the casket containing the body of the former Swedish princess who had won Belgium's heart.

Nuns prayed in the four corners of the black-draped reception room. Astrid, born a Protestant, joined the Catholic Church after her "love match" marriage to Leopold in 1926.

Her Skull Fractured.

The queen's skull was fractured when she was thrown from the automobile. The car swerved and struck a tree when Leopold took his eyes from the road to look at a map Astrid was examining.

Moving at 45 miles an hour, the car hit the tree, bumped over an eight-inch curb and rolled over among reeds beside the road in shallow water.

King Leopold was thrown from behind the wheel of the big American model touring car and fell not far from the Queen, who lay beside the tree that had killed her.

She was unconscious. Leopold was knocked senseless but was standing beside his wife when aid came.

Takes Wife Into Arms.

The ruler, his face bleeding, then took his dying wife into his arms and kissed her again and again. He spoke to her, but she gave no signs of recognizing him.

The chauffeur, who sat in the rear seat, remained in the car as it went over the curb and into shallow water. His face bruised and cut by glass from the smashed winshield, he scrambled out and went to the King and Queen.

The tragedy occurred about 9:14 a. m. along a beautiful road skirting the Lake of Lucerne. The King and Queen and their children had been staying at Villa Hallshorn, the late King Albert's Swiss residence, until the children returned last night.

It was at this villa that Astrid and Leopold learned of King Albert's death while alone on a mountain-

Prince de Ligne Tells of Seeing Astrid Recently

Counselor of Embassy Describes Graciousness of the Queen.

Only three weeks ago Prince Eugene de Ligne, Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, saw lovely Queen Astrid with her husband, the King of the Belgians, and their friends, the Duke and Duchess of York, receiving at Laeken, the "little palace" about 5 miles out of Brussels.

Prince de Ligne was probably the last person now in Washington to see the queen alive. Yesterday he was the first here to receive official notice of her death in an automobile accident. In the absence of the Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten Ponthoz, the counselor is in charge of the embassy. Both the Count and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz are visiting in Belgium and are not expected back in Washington until October.

It was Prince de Ligne who yesterday received calls and messages of condolence from dignitaries in official and diplomatic life. First to call was Secretary of State Cordell Hull. He was followed by the Italian and German Ambassadors and the Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Per Wijkman, who is acting charge d'affaires while Minister Bostrom is visiting his native Sweden, the homeland of Queen Astrid. The Minister and Mme. Bostrom will return to Washington within a month.

Roosevelt Sends Sympathy.

President Roosevelt conveyed his sympathy by telephone at noon.

Later in the day the President sent the following message to King Leopold:

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I have been deeply moved at the tragic news of the death of Her Majesty the Queen. We hasten to extend to Your Majesty our heartfelt sympathy.

"The people of the United States will share the grief of the Belgian people in the loss of a Queen who so graciously personified the ideals of Belgium.

"I earnestly hope that Your Majesty will rapidly recover from the injuries which I understand you have personally suffered. I send you my affectionate regards in this hour of your great sorrow."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The following telegram was sent to the Belgian foreign minister by Secretary of State Hull:

"I am grieved beyond expression to learn of the catastrophe which has taken from the royal family and the people of Belgium their beloved Queen. Mrs. Hull joins with me in extending deep and lasting sympathy. We trust that the injuries which His

Belgians Rally To Their Ruler In His Grief

Monarch Assured of Their Support; Tragedy Kept From Children.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Aug. 29.—Belgium, stunned by the sudden and tragic death of her young and gracious Queen, expressed her grief tonight in an official communique which said:

"Still under the shock of the tragic death of King Albert, Belgium weeps for the Queen, whose youth, grace and kindness has conquered her people."

King Leopold will arrive tomorrow morning (about 2:50 a. m. Eastern standard time) by special train with the body and the funeral probably will be held Monday. Prayers were held tonight in all churches and will continue daily through the period of mourning.

Children Kept in Ignorance.

The three children of the dead Queen went to bed tonight without having been told of her death.

A strange hush fell over this city, which is reputedly one of the noisiest and most cheerful in Europe, as it entered a period of mourning which may last six months.

The mothers of Belgium were particularly affected by the accident which took the life of the happy young mother of three. Astrid had glorified household arts and been the constant and devoted companion of her royal husband.

Cabinet Issues Statement.

In the words of the official statement, which came in the form of a cabinet proclamation:

"The whole country is in consternation. It shares the immense sorrow of the King. It is gathered faithfully and close around him.

"It bows with deep-felt tenderness over the royal princes and princess who have a mother no longer."

From the lowlands near Antwerp to the wooded Aix-la-Chapelle hills, the red, yellow and black of the national colors flapped limply at half-staff in a fitful breeze atop public buildings and private homes, the traditional sign of mourning and one that swift tragedy had again overtaken the nation.

Premier Paul van Zeeland, after a special cabinet meeting at which the Queen's death was announced, left by airplane this afternoon for Basel, Switzerland. There he will meet the special train on which King Leopold is bringing his wife's body back home.

Train Arrives Today.

Another special train was to leave tonight for the Luxembourg frontier to await the Swiss train, arriving early tomorrow morning.

Britain to Take Strong Stand At Geneva Talk

Il Duce's Hands-Off Threat Fails to Alter Attitude of Downing Street.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 29.—The British government intends to proceed with its own strong policy at Geneva, informed quarters reported today, regardless of what Benito Mussolini has to say.

Failing in efforts at Geneva to avert war, Britain hopes the United States and France jointly will call a consultation of all signatories of the Briand-Kellogg Peace Pact in an effort to prevent war.

Proclamation Ignored.

Il Duce's proclamation last night was termed just another of his customary strong public statements by these sources. Downing Street, it was said, officially ignored the long statement and refuses to be stampeded into a reply now.

There has been no formal approach either to Washington or Paris in the Kellogg Pact question. But London hopes if a final resort were necessary President Roosevelt would take the initiative in a move to keep Mussolini from war through the treaty.

Lukewarm Reaction.

Mussolini's statement that British interests are not imperiled by his plans got a lukewarm reception here. It was emphasized the main thing Britain is after is not a statement about its own affairs, but an affirmation of Italian intentions not to resort to war.

Anthony Eden, minister of League of Nations affairs, who will head the delegation at Geneva next week at the vital council meeting, went to Lympne for the day. But both he and Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, who is at Norfolk, are keeping in touch with the foreign office.

Premier Stanley Baldwin will return next week from a vacation in France, cutting it short.

Party Leaders Fear Inflation On Bonus Issue

This little-advertised bill, incidentally, will open the bonus jackpot to 239,717 veterans who have not applied, at a total estimated cost of $222,227,418 to the Government.

Differences between the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, simmering for more than a year, reached serious dimensions last session when the V. F. W. threw full support behind the $2,000,000,000 inflationary Patman bonus bill, while the legion, claiming it was not interested in methods of payment, supported the Vinson measure, leaving financing up to the Treasury.

Patman Bill Vetoed.

The Patman bill was approved by both houses, but vetoed by the President, primarily because of the inflation feature. The legion swung its support to the measure after passage, but the organization's high command is prepared to insist again in St. Louis that the legion commit itself only to full bonus payment and not to inflation.

The forces of Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, however, will go to the convention demanding support of the Patman bill.

A third measure, the Steiwer-Byrnes bill, worked out as a compromise in the closing days of Congress, and promising approximately 98 per cent cash payment, will figure prominently in both legion and V. F. W. conclaves. It was a prediction by Col. Taylor that this bill will pass Congress next session that drew yesterday's sharp retort from Van Zandt.

"Everyone familiar with the situation in Congress knows that the Steiwer-Byrnes bill could have been enacted if it had been given the united support of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion in June or July, or even early in August," said the V. F. W. commander-in-chief yesterday.

"When this fair and just compromise was laid before me, I readily agreed to approve it. For some reason beyond my understanding, Commander Belgrano refused to indorse the measure."

Woman Wins Step In University Fight

Negro Can Apply for Admission to U. of Va.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 29.—Armistead C. Gordon, jr., acting dean of the graduate school of the University of Virginia, today said he would notify Alice G. Jackson, young Richmond Negro, that she could submit her transcript for consideration. Presentation of the transcript is tantamount to application for admission.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has advised her that it will not intercede in her behalf until she has exhausted every effort to secure entrance to the university.

Charles Houston, association counsel, said the woman, who is a graduate of Virginia Union University and a former student of Smith College in Massachusetts, must make application before the association will act.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended August 24 as approximately 6,240,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week, 1934, 6,314,000 tons; 1933, 7,862,000 tons.

Between You and Me

New Party Talk Hot Air; Bonds Long Since Cast Aside; G. O. P. Moves Important.

By Raymond Clapper

TALK about a new rump Democratic Party is flooding the newspapers again, now that the unlamented departure of Congress has relieved the pressure on the news columns. Bust most of it is hot air.

The object, of course, is to set up an organization which will split the Roosevelt vote and let the Republicans ride in. But it is based on a misconception of the realities.

The only practical merit of the idea is confined to its use as a propaganda weapon against Mr. Roosevelt between now and the presidential campaign next year. To consider it seriously in any other respect is to misjudge the practical factors involved in the 1936 fight. The best chance for the conservatives to win next year lies in them throwing all of their strength into the Republican Party, not splitting part of it up into a Democratic rump movement.

* * *

The idea of a conservative Democratic ticket is based primarily on the theory that the country is divided into two static political groups, one Republican and one Democratic. Advocates of a rump ticket assume there is a great reservoir of voters hostile to the New Deal, but so glued to the Democratic label that they could not, even for principle, vote for any one who called himself a Republican.

Well, when you see oover carrying four Southern States in 1928 and Roosevelt carrying all except six Eastern States four years later, and the Democrats sweeping dear old Pennsylvania two years later than that, what happens to your idea that the party label is a binding and deciding factor?

Actually the decisive bloc of voters in this conutry long ago was wrenched loose from party bonds. And how many of the 5,000,000 or more new voters who have come of age since the depression give a hoot about a party label? Not to mentino the older voters who already have had their experience in leaping back and forth across the party fence?

The proposal to set up a Jeffersonian haven for deserting Democrats is not likely to pull any Southern State away from Roosevelt—omitting Louisiana for another reason of course. On the other hand if it had any influence at all in the North where there is no such prejudice against the Republican label, it would only serve to catch voters who were already headed into the Republican camp.

The point there is that a vote by a rump Democratic ticket is held away from the Republicans exactly one-half as effective as a vote allowed to go on over and be counted for the Republican instead of merely being taken out of the Roosevelt count. Thus, in actual practice, the rump movement, to the extent that it had any as effective as leaving the opposipull at all, would be only one-half tion field entirely to the Republicans, where they could catch the full benefit from the anti-Roosevelt vote.

* * *

Many assume casually that Democrats who condemned the New Deal program in Congress will go down the line against Roosevelt in the presidential campaign. Two of the most effective of these critics—Senators Glass and Byrd of Virginia—already have taken pains to let it be known that they are Democrats and have never bolted a ticket. Glass and Bailey of North Carolina, tw ostrong anti-administration critics, are up for reelection next year. They would scarcely want to run on a split ticket. Tydings of Maryland, another strong critic, is attempting to consolidate his position as the successor of former Gov. Ritchie in Democratic control of Maryland. His interest is all on the side of carrying the State for the Democratic ticket next year.

Any Democratic political leader, though he may dissent from Administration policies, jeopardizes his control and threatens to wreck his organization by leaving the party's presidential ticket. Not many wish to take that chance. The only party leaders who can be expected to blot the ticket are those who have no following, who lead only themselves. Even the tamest campaign always sees a number of these switches. They influence practically no votes.

* * *

Republican maneuvering at the moment is of far greater significance than the vague talk of a Democratic rump movement. For the first time since long before 1932, Republican maneuvers have real vitality, because they are based on a conviction that the party has a chance. As yet it may be an even chance, but all trace of the despair with which the Republicans went through the motions in 1932 and 1934 is gone. Everything that happens on the Republican side now carries real importance.

* * *

Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, started his avowed campaign in New Hampshire, where the first of the 1936 presidential primaries will be held. He is the most active aspirant. But the man to watch is still pretty much under wraps—Gov. Landon of Kansas. his friends have countered the Knox activity by bringing out an indorsement of Landon from former Vice President Curtis, of Kansas. Senator Capper and other Kansas Republicans have seconded the nomination. Curtis no longer seeks to dominate Kansas politics, but Knox supporters had been jabbing at Landon by claiming Curtis. It was unwise tactics. The first rule of a smart presidential candidate is to keep out of the home territory of other candidates.

Another good rule is not to get going too strong at the start lest the wind give out on the home stretch. Landon is sitting tight, giving the country a demonstration of how a State can balance its budget, reduce its bonded indebtedness, and put itself on a pay-as-you-go basis in times like these. It might occur to some that this is a better way of running for President in a country fed upon extravagant expenditures, than to go chasing around the land lamenting that Roosevelt hasn't been perfect.

As for the Borah talk, it is strong, motivated by great respect for the senior member of the Senate, and is perhaps an expression by many Republicans of an unconscious longing for a party leader who is courageous, liberal, sincere and who has rugged character. It is significant chiefly for this reason, rather than because of any wide expectation that Borah will be nominated.

These are the three Republican figures of real political vitality in the presidential picture at the moment.

* * *

Anyway, so far as the presidential fight is concerned, we can be thankful for one thing. It won't be Huey Long now.

Hurricane Sweeps Lifeboats to Sea

Ships Tossed Helplessly About Off Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—Officers of the British freighter York City today told a story of how the ship was caught in a storm of hurricane force, 800 miles off the Virginia Capes last Friday night and left at the mercy of the sea without lifeboats, wireless or whistle.

The freighter, carrying a cargo of manganese ore from Poti, Russia, docked here today.

The storm splintered lifeboats, washed away the bridge railing, snapped off ventilators, flooded the dining quarters waist deep and stove in wooden stanchions separating the officers' and crew's quarters.

Third Officer Robert Moore said the wind started as a moderate gale and reached hurrican force—75 miles or more an hour—within an hour's time. At times visibility was zero, he said, and the bow could not be sighted from the bridge.

"We felt that we were justified in demanding that New Jersey authorities produce the original prints of this baby and conceded that prints thus produced by the genuine prints of the Lindbergh child before any comparison with the prints we had in our possession was made.

"The investigation leading to the facts in relation to this child covered a long period and the further our investigation went the more apparent it became that there was astriking likelihood this child might be the lost baby.

"Neither I nor any of my investigators has interviewed any prisoners anywhere in connection with the youngster. We sincerely trust that the genuine prints of the Lindbergh baby will be made available to us and we feel in view of all facts and circumstances in connection with the child we have located warrants our request to the authorities to produce the prints of the Lindbergh baby.

"In view, however, of the evasive nature of the reply of Colonel Schwarzkopf it appears we may have some difficulty in procuring the original prints."

Mussolini Bids Cabinet Meet Again Sept. 14

Expects Ethiopian Affair Will Have Reached a Crisis by Then.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Headquarters, Grand Army Maneuvers, Bolzano, Aug. 29.—Premier Benito Mussolini, expecting his conflicts with Ethiopia and the European crisis to reach their climax in mid-September, today summoned his cabinet to reconvene September 14.

The cabinet, which last night approved his recommendations putting Italy on a war basis for three years, will sit again the same day the League of Nations assembly convenes to hear the council's report on its vital session scheduled for September 4.

Before the next cabinet meeting Ethiopia's rains will have abated, Britain will have done battle at Geneva and Il Duce will be in a position to survey first results of Italy's colonial ambitions in Africa.

Europe's Peace Held Safe.

Despite the swashbuckling tones of last night's statements by Mussolini and the cabinet, the conviction grew in Italian and international circles that Italy's grievances against Ethiopia will be settled without endangering European peace.

Warnings by Il Duce and the cabinet that League application of sanctions would mean war were expected to sober criticism abroad.

Many believed Mussolini has received assurances Britain would not attempt isolated action to prevent Italian plans in Ethiopia if the League fails to act.

More Troops Leave.

Meanwhile Italian plans for campaigning continue unabated.

Four ships carrying troops and supplies sailed today while the government pushed assembly of documents to be submitted to Geneva as evidence Ethiopia is unfit for League membership. Mussolini is expected to say more on the subject when he addresses his troops at the conclusion of army maneuvers Saturday.

With the Italian Army, Bolzano, Italy, Aug. 29.—Benito Mussolini was off to the mock wars along the Australian frontier today, leaving Italians and foreigners to ponder the denunciation of Ethiopia, the warning to Great Britain and the exhortation to Italians he voiced after last night's cabinet session.

95 Cents Rate For Frederick Taxes Is Fixed

Budget Provides $283,393 Expenditures, $5,000 Above Last Year.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 29.—At a special meeting last night Mayor Lloyd C. Culler and the aldermen fixed the city tax rate at 95 cents on the $100 of real estate and personal property and 15 cents on the $100 for securities, the same as last year. The budget provides for revenues and expenditures of $283,393.36, about $5,000 in excess of last year.

Approximately $137,137.30 is anticipated from taxes on real estate and $11,040.88 from personal property. Taxes on share corporations, it is estimated, will yield $23,275; water rents, $62,000, and $900 from the new coal dealers' licenses. The revenue from real estate will be slightly more than last year but about $13,000 less from water rents. The largest expenditures anticipated include $25,000, for the police department; $21,168, for the fire department; $16,990, light department; $12,400, street maintenance; $10,891, street consruction, and $11,304 for the water department. The sum of $33,000 will be set aside to retire serial bonds. A special appropriation of $7,180 includes $2,000 for the C. Burr Artz Library, $1,800 for the chamber of commerce and appropriations for charitable institutions and organizations.

September 24 was set by an ordinance for a special election on a bond issue to finance the construction of a proposed new sewerage system to cost approximately $1,000,000. Of this amount $450,000 has been granted by the Federal Government. The ordinance authorizes the city election supervisors to arrange for the election for which $2,500 was appropriated.

Prince de Ligne Tells of Seeing Astrid Recently

Counselor of Embassy Describes Graciousness of the Queen.

CORDELL HULL.

Flags at the Belgian Embassy and Swedish Legation were placed at half-staff immediately upon word of the queen's death and will remain so for several weeks. Notice of the length of official mourning had not been received. Prince de Ligne made tentative arrangements for a memorial service next Wednesday. It probably will be held in St. Matthew's Church.

As noticeable as the formalities of mourning, set in motion yesterday, was the genuine grief expressed at both the Belgian Embassy and Swedish Legation over the death of the beautiful and beloved consort of the King of the Belgians.

Prince de Ligne recalled the joyous expression on Queen Astrid's face the last time he saw her, about three weeks ago.

"Their Happiness Beautiful."

"To see the happiness of her and her husband was something beautiful," he said. "It was a marriage of inclination on their part, not an arranged affair, and was one of the happiest in all Europe. And while the Queen, as Princess Astrid, was always reserved and quiet, she assumed a new and altogether charming dignity after her wedding to Leopold. The King, like Queen Astrid, has always been quiet and serious. In fact she sometimes seemed almost lively in comparison. But their temperaments were similar. That is probably one reason they were so congenial."

Laeken, where Prince de Ligne last saw the Queen, is much smaller than the main palace in Brussels. Surrounded by gardens and retaining a certain rural atmosphere despite its proximity to the capital, it was always the favorite home of Astrid.

Her tastes were simple. She was chiefly interested in social welfare, charities and housewifely pursuits. The Swedish commercial counselor remembered her as a girl attending a school in Stockholm, where she studied domestic science. She also attended a French pension in Stockholm, where she was accepted as "one of the girls" and became extremely popular. After she became a Queen she continued to correspond with friends she had made at the pension.

Whiteley Describes Visits.

James Gustavus Whiteley, consul general of Belgium with offices in Washington and Baltimore, yesterday described the visits of Astrid to the homes of Belgian workingmen.

"She was not content," he said, "to hear how those people lived. She wanted to see for herself. When Belgium was in the midist of a depression she organized a welfare fund called 'The Appeal of the Queen.' Money came in through subscription. Then recently special postage stamps were issued bearing the picture of the queen's three children. The stamps, sold for a higher-than-usual price, brought still more money to the fund, which was administered by the queen herself."

Astrid, upon ascending the throne of the Belgians with Leopold, was satisfied to live as other queens id the same country had lived before her, according to Prince de Ligne.

"She couldn't have made the court much more simple because it has always been unpretentious," he said. "But she certainly did nothing to make it more formal or elaborate. Her own upbringing in Sweden had been as simple as if she were the daughter of a well-to-do commoner. She retained that outlook to the delight of the Belgian people.

"She was so genuine. There was never a bit of affectation about her. No wonder everybody in Belgium, as well as in her native Sweden, loved her."

Missing Drug Kit Laden With Poison; Police Wa

A warning to Washingtonians was sounded yesterday by police and Louis Berhoff, salesman for a Milwaukee drug concern.

Berkoff's sample case, containing enough deadly poison to kill 200 persons, was lot or stolen in the 900 block of G street northwest. Berkoff reported the loss to police and enlisted the aid of newspapers in an effort to warn the finder or finders.

The case, he said, contained insectides and a large quantity of calcium cyanide—deadly poison to smell or taste. He feared that if the case was stolen the robbers would discard it as worthless and small children might find it. The case was last seen in a Ninth street book store.

All Lovers of Royal Romance Mourn Snow Princess' Passing

Lovely Astrid Drew Wide Public Attention Decade Ago When Her Name Was Linked With Bachelor Prince of Wales.

The "snow princess" who became Queen of the Belgians is dead, and all lovers of royal romance mourned yesterday.

Accidental death, striking for the second time at the Belgian royal family, brought to an untimely end a romance which the world had watched with an approving eye ever since it learned that the then Prince Leopold, of the Belgians, would wed the pretty Astrid, of Sweden, who had been named by admiring countrymen "the snow princess" for her skiing skill.

Grown from a quiet girl to a tall, gracious queen, Astrid gained in the affections of her people because of her democratic attitude and her simple, domestic habits.

Time scarcely gave her an opportunity to prove her ability as a queen who would leave an indelible mark in history, but it did not rob her of the love of her people.

It was more than a decade ago that Astrid first drew widespread public attention when she was mentioned as one of the fair European princesses upon whom the bachelor Prince of Wales was looking with favor. The girlish Swedish princess must have laughed quietly at the rumors, however, for even at that time the handsome Prince Leopold was paying her court incognito.

Romance Flourishes.

The romance blossomed at the Frichem Castle in Sweden, where Astrid went every summer with her family. The couple had met in 1924 at Copenhagen, where the Swedish princess was visiting her elder sister, the wife of Prince Axel of Denmark.

Both being of a quiet, serious disposition, the young prince and princess found much in common, and their romance soon took a fairy-book turn. Even the people of Belgium were unaware that their heir-apparent had fallen victim to Cupid's arrow. As Leopold made frequent secretive trips to Sweden, the populace was told he was going incognitio to an unknown destination.

Indeed, he did traval as an ordinary bourgeois lover, going second class to a small country town, where he was met and taken by car to Stockholm. The people of Sweden were similary uninformed about the identity of the visitor.

King Albert gladly gave his consent to the royal match, explaining that his son was free to make his own decisions. And so the marriage, which occurred in November, 1926, was a union of true lovers and not a state affair arranged years in advance to forward the political ambitions of their elders.

A civil ceremony took place on November 4, 1926, in Stockholm. A religious marriage rite was performed in Brussels on November 10 in the Catholic Cathedral of St. Gudule, to comply with the desires of the Belgian royal family and their subjects.

Won Belgians' Admiration.

From the day that Astrid waved a captivating hand as she was borne into Antwerp aboard a Swedish warship, the Belgians took the princess to their hearts. They smiled approvingly as the royal couple settled into a domestic retirement.

They were pleased when in 1927 Astrid bore the Princess Josephine Charlotte and delighted when the royal succession was assured with the birth of Prince Baudouin, present heir-presumptive to the throne, in 1930. The third child, Prince Albert, was born June 6, 1934.

When the first child was born Princess Astrid further endeared herself to her adopted countymen by mingling with other young matrons as she pushed a baby carriage along the boardwalk or played with the infant on the beach.

Until the tragic death of King Albert, Leopold and Astrid lived modestly and unostentatiously on an income that was smaller than that of many commoners. When Leopold ascended to the throne, however, the Chamber of Deputies raised the king's salary $345,000 to $2,760,000.

Since becoming queen February 23, 1934, Astrid has not deviated from the modest behavior which characterized her life as princess and wife of a prince. It was her domestic ability, the ability to cook, darn socks, manage a household and the like, that first drew the people of Sweden to her.

Interested in Hospital Work.

The Belgians were equally pleased at these wifely traits when she came to Brussels to live. To these she addied a skill at nursing and a keen interest in hospital work, as had Queen Elizabeth, her mother-in-law.

Born of a notably democratic family, Astrid was the daughter of Prince Charles and a niece of King Gustav. She had two sisters, Margarentha and Martha, who together once built a doll house large enugh to entertain their father and mother at tea.

She was a descendant of Marshal Jean Baptiste Bernadotte, Napoleon's great general, who became first crown prince of Sweden in 1810 and then ascended to the throne as Charles XIV and founded the present Swedish dynasty. Her father was the son of King Oscar II.

Her childhood was spent chiefly in a medium-sized house in the Djurgarden Park, near Stockholm. Early in life she was taught the domestic arts and virtues of cooking, sewing and household managing that remained her characteristics even after she became queen.

Fond of Outdoor Sports.

She was fond of outdoor sports as a girl and became a splendid horsewoman, a good golfer, and an able skater. She frequently drove her own car alone around Stockholm.

Astrid's death leaves but six reigning queens in Europe's dwindling royalty, The Queen of the Belgians was the youngest, at 29, and one of the most charming.

Queens remaining are Queen Mary of England, Wilhelmena of the Netherlands, Alexandrine of Denmark, Elena of Italy, Maud of Norway, and Ionna of Bulgaria, the former Princess Giovana.

King Describes Tragedy.

King Leopold told briefly of what happened, piecing out his knowledge with what the chauffeur said. Members of the household in a second car far behind saw nothing.

A farmer on the other side of the road heard the crash. He ran and telephoned for Dr. Steinegger, then called gendarmes. The doctor was first to arrive, with two gendarmes, Hugo Ruckesthul and Jean Rog.

"The first person I noticed," said Ruckestuhl, "was a man standing with torn clothes near a tree by the roadside.

"I recognized immediately from photographs that he was the King of the Belgians. I address him, but he said nothing. I looked on the ground and saw the queen lying dead.

King Seems Stunned.

"The King was not crying. He seemed stunned by the blow and stared at his dead wife with his face drawn.

"A man and woman who were beside him said they were part of the entourage * * * the man and woman gave me the King's and queen's joint passport, which was in the name of M. and Mme. Lambert.

"My reconstruction of the accident, which happened on a wide, straight highway, makes it seem the king must have taken his eyes off the road.

"For whatever reason it was, the car swerved, hit the curb, bounced against the tree, and then into the water. The queen must have been killed by the shock when the car struck the tree.

"The king stood as though he were in a trance beside the body of the queen until the doctor suggested we ride back to Kussnacht to get his wounds dressed there before going to Lucerne.

Waits for Ambulance.

"The king waited until the ambulance arrived from Lucerne, then climbed into the car and went to Kussnacht, from which he followed his wife's body to Lucerne. The chauffeur, who also was badly hurt, was taken back to Lucerne.

"It was horrible. Gendarme Jean Rogg and I were first impressed by the fact the king did not talk, but later we learned he could not because his jaw was injured. The whole scene was one of shock and amazement.

"The doctor just examined the queen and found she was dead. The king's entourage told me she died in his arms. * * * The king must have stood beside the body of his dead wife for an hour before the ambulance arrived."

Thousands Throng Villa.

The King's villa and the scene of the accident were thronged with thousands of curious, but heavy lines of gendarmes kept them at a distance.

Police said the Queen was thrown more than 12 feet when the car struck the tree. Such was the force of the collision that the radiator was torn completely off the car.

Although gendarmes recognized the identity of the King and Queen, it was some time before they revealed who the accident victims were, as the royal couple's passports bore incognito names.

Early, a Swiss newspaper printed the death of "Mme. Lambert." Official confirmation came with the formal identification of Astrid's body by Peter Van Moos, Belgian consul at Lucerne.

King's Arm Stitched.

Doctors took seven stitches in the Knig's arm and said he would be able to make the return by special train tonight.

The King's chauffeur, after treatment for shock, insisted upon returning to the wreck to get the King and Queen's belongings. He stowed these in a motorboat and went across the lake to the villa.

Informed quarters denied a report published abroad (not carried by the Associated Press) that the Queen expected a fourth child.

At dusk the King asked to be alone with the Queen and knelt before her coffin for nearly two hours.

Premier Paul Von Van Zeeland arrived by special plane from Brussels. He went in and dropped on his knees beside the King for a few minutes at the coffin.

[A Reuters (British) News Agency dispatch to London reported Van Zeeland as saying that he had a terrible journey and that it was only due to the skill of the pilot there was not another tragedy.]

A steady rain fell tonight. Members of the household of the villa said Leopold was "pretty badly broken up." Three doctors were constantly with him.

A stream of automobiles drew up to the villa bringing flowers. A stone marker already has been put on the spot where the Queen was killed and officials said a permanent one would be placed there later.

Belgians Rally To King in Hour Of His Sorrow

Monarch Assured of Their Support; Tragedy Kept From Children.

The Belgian train will bear the body to the capital.

The three children of the young queen are Princess Josephine Charlotte, 7; Prince Baudoin, 4, heir to the throne, and Prince Albert, but 14 months old, who was born after the deathof his grandfather. They arrived this morning by train. They had left their parents in Lucerne last night before the accident.

The stock was closed and all public entertainments were cancelled for a period of mouring. Crowds gathered in small groups and quietly discussed the tragedy.

The usually noisy and colorful sidewalk cafes were almost deserted tonight. Many of their habitues joined thousands who journeyed to the palace to stand outside the massive gates in silent mourning.

Peasants trudging homeward from their day's work in the fields heard church bells mournfully calling the populace to prayers for the dead queen. Tears streamed unashamedly down the faces of both simple country women and smartly dressed ones in the city.

Here and there women, and men occasionally, were seen to drop on their knees and remain for a few minutes in silent prayer. Other silent groups gathered about the proclamation of mourning signed by the cabinet ministers and posted throughout the country.

Dozens to whom the sharp grief of Albert's death was brought back by Astrid's sudden passing journeyed to the crypt at Laeken wher the former King is buried and deposited wreaths. They stood quietly in memory of the warrior-king.

Brussels housewives saw Astrid and Leopold dozens of times together in parks pushing a perambulator after the first royal child, Josephine Charlotte, was born. After the birth of the lively little crown prince, Baudouin, Astrid was seen frequently at Ostend and other seaside resorts building castles in the sand for the children, just as thousands of other visitors were doing.

Mining districts, hard hit by the depression, were especially grieved today. The queen, in addition to raised over 7,000,000 francs for reheading a national fund which lief work, visited the district a number of times and always left a banknote from her own purse in every home she entered.

titles. His great-grandfather, the first of the three Sir Walters, was a daring chief and his unsuccessful attempt to rescue King James V from the Earl of Angus is the foundtion of the story told by his later poet namesake in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel."

Sir Walter, the first Lord Scott, had warred against England, and later was sent as a hostage to Queen Elizabeth of England.

The Queen imperiously demanded of him how he had dared to engage in such deeds. The ready answer came:

"What is there that a man dare not do?"

"With 10,000 such men, our brother of Scotland might shake the firmest throne in Europe," the Queen commented.

This "brother" was James VI, who on becoming James I of Great Britain, among his first acts made a lord of the intrepid warrior, Scott. His succession retained the honors.

Suspect Arrested In Carolina Holdup

Named by Witness as the Actual Gunman.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 29.—Charged as the actual gunman in a $10,525 bank messenger holdup near Durham, N. C., two weeks ago, Worth Vaughan, 25, was seized in a Richmond boarding house yesterday and turned over to Carolina authorities last night to be returned there.

Deputy Sheriffs L. L. Morgan and J. E. Ferrell, of Durham, who took the prisoner into custody, said they have testimony of a taxi driver, now held as a material witness, that Vaughan was one of two men in a black roadster who held up R. L. Herndon, a messenger of the Fidelity Bank, on the Chapel Hill highway, and at gun-point forced him to surrender a satchel containing $10,525.

The cab driver, who witnessed the robbery, named Vaughan as the actual gunman, Sheriff Morgan said.

Cocktail Nook Is Being Built In the Willard

Other Night Spots Laying Winter Plans; Beauties Vie at Chevy Chase.

By Chanticleer.

Our "ear to the ground" department reports that things are going on around town in the after-dark precincts. For instance, all that hammering and sawing and mortar mixing in the Willard Hotel, northeast corner, is not without purpose. Yessir, there's going to be soft lights and fast service in that corner room in a short time, the kind of spot you've been looking for when you want a cocktail in a big hurry.

* * * *

Although it hasn't been named as yet it might well be dubbed the "Quickie" because it's expected to solve the problem of the gentleman who wants to buy a drink for a friend between street cars.

* * * *

It is also a matter of record now that Jack Reynolds and Joe Murphy, after a long and honorable stay at the Mayfair, will leave next Saturday for other fertile fields of singing and playing. The names of their successors have not been pushed under my door as yet, but that important information will be ready for you next Wednesday in this column.

* * * *

Nothing was said, as I recall, earlier in the week about the appearance this week of Alfred Latell and Sylvan Dill at the Lotus. As a matter of fact it's Bonzo who cuts the wide swath in the Latell-Dill act. Bonzo is an educated dog. He's been on the stage for years and has the distinction of having appeared in the "Vanities," and not so long ago at the National in a Ziegfeld Follies. All week the customers have been asking Latell whether Bonzo wasn't the same purp who appeared in the Follies and the answer, of course, is yes.

* * * *

Also at the Lotus this week: The lovely singing violinist of "Going Native" . . . and seven girls of the "Going Native" dancing line in several routines . . . Too bad that Dick Butler isn't around the Hamilton these days to see the peepullies swarming in and out of his rainbow room . . . but he's retired to the top floor or the old home town or some place to nurse a particularly bad cold.

* * * *

More "ear to the ground" department information: La Paree will open a new fall and winter program soon . . . with Emery Daugherty and his orchestra back on the old stand. And what's more . . . Marie Fowler, who nearly quit the old home town for a fling on Broadway, will be right back there with the Daugherty piccolos and oboes.

* * * *

Now you can get your Sunday evening dinner or supper at the Madrillon again. Peter Borras has relented, after closing his restaurant for several Sundays, and you can safely lay plans for next Sunday night. And it won't be so very much longer now until Leon Brusiloff and all the Brusiloffians will be dusting off the music for their informal floor acts and the porter will be polishing the "star" on the first dressing room for another season of Madrillon floor shows.

* * * *

It's a dead cinch where the college boys and gals will be tonight. Chevy Chase Lake is the place and the finals in the beauty pageant the event. Tonight some little morsel of Washington loveliness will be named "Miss Washington" and that means a trip and an entry in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant . . . with lots of good things to eat and movie tests and radio opportunities and, if she wins the national contest, a trip to Europe. Lee Fields and the orchestra will provide the musical background for the "beauty parade."

* * * *

After the prize is won tonight at Chevy Chase Lake, the lucky girl will receive the first honor, even before she gets to Atlantic City. Maryland Club Gardens has arranged to honor her . . . just sort of top off a thrilling day with its own brand of feting. And while at the Gardens "Miss Washington" will see Bobbie Barnett and her fans cavorting about the platform on the far side of the pool . . . and the sophisticated tap dancer, Howard Montgomery, and, singing from the gondola, Washington's own Marjorie King.

* * * *

Bill Merriam rushes in to advise that the new Club Volga Boatman will be one of the most elaborately decorated after-dark spots in this section of the woods. Matt Windsor, it would appear, has brought a graduate of the Moscow Art Academy from New York by the name of Nicholi Vasilieff, for the express purpose of causing the customers to say "ummm, ummm" when they walk into No. 1 Thomas Circle next month. Vasilieff is basing the murals and ceiling motif on a Russian peasant grotesque depicting the life and customs of the original Volga Boatmen—those much sung and maligned laborers.

Portia is the name of the young person at the Shoreham Terrace who does the toreador cape dance. And Portia surprised the real toreadors of Mexico one time by getting right out in the arena and meeting a bull on an eye-to-eye basis. When you see her executing the graceful motions of the bullfighter you can also appreciate she has courage as well . . . Barnee reports that "Cheek to Cheek" is the growing hit from "Top Hat."

Final "ear to the ground" note: The Powhatan Roof will sing its swan song to summer Saturday night.

Rule Works.

Kansas City, Aug. 29 (AP).—Allen W. Lewis, 80, wed 60 years ago today, advanced a formula for successful marriage. Speaking for himself and his 78-year-old wife, he said: "We have a rule—a good one. We never both get mad at the same time."

Maestros of Entertainment

Peter Borras (who isn't nearly as severe as he appears to the left, above) has relented on his Sunday ban at the Madrillon. It's merely a suggestion for dinner or supper next Sunday night. To the right, Ralph Hawkins, "king of the drums," who mixes an excellent brand of good humor and fine sense of rhythm nightly with Moe Baer's orchestra at the Club Habana roof.

Visiting Scouts Keep Capital Council Busy

Foreign, Native Boys Come in Numbers, Despite Canceled Jamboree.

Scout headquarters during the last two weeks has been as busy entertaining visiting delegations of Scouts both from the States and foreign countries, as though the Jamboree had not been canceled. Many of these delegations were entertained at the local embassies and legations.

In addition to foreign Scouts, between 3,000 and 3,500 from various parts of the States have been received by Washington guides and conducted to points of interest about the city. These have varied in number all the way from lone Scouts to the Sacramento, Calif., party of 365.

Hugh Armstrong, of the troop committee of Troop 92, has been assisting at Scout headquarters as contact man for the visiting delegations.

Camp Roosevelt will close next Monday, after one of the most successful years and the largest attendance in its history. The annual Scout camp banquet will be held in the mess hall at camp, August 31, at 5 p. m., and the staff banquet at the Calvert Club, at Chesapeake Beach will be held September 3.

A final six-page edition of the camp's weekly paper, the Rough Rider, will be issued next Sunday, giving a summary of the accomplishments of the different camp departments for the season.

Camp Wilson remains open until Saturday, September 14. Scouts have been taking advantage of the opportunity for troop and camp experience at this delightful site.

Talley Recovering From Injury.

J. Wallace Talley, assistant executive, has been confined to his home for the last two weeks as a result of an injury to his back. He expects to be back at his desk at Scout headquarters in the near future.

All Scouts rejoice at news that Dr. Paul Bartsch, vice president of the council and chairman of the Court of Honor, is now on the road to recovery from his recent operation.

Regional headquarters for the Third Region, to which the District of Columbia Council belongs, has announced that the annual regional meeting will be held in three sections, one at Altoona, Pa., September 28; another at Bethlehem, Pa., October 5, and another at Richmond, Va., October 12. A conference for Scout executives will be held at South Moontain Manor, near Reading, Pa., October 6 to 9.

Court of Honor September 14.

The next session of the Court of Honor will be held at Peck Chapel, Twenty-eighth and M streets, September 14, at 7:30 p. m.

The Court of Award for conferring of honors won during the last three months will be held at Powell School September 21.

The annual eagle trip of Troop 8 this year will be through West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. The group will include Bill Berrton, Richard Ruoff, Ned Nye, Yule Fisher and Bill Westlake. They will leave Washington September 7.

Troop 82 is now in camp for a two-week period near Syria, in the Shenandoah Mountains.

Money No Object Now To Marrying Justice

Kirksville, Mo., Aug. 28 (AP).—Lack of funds will be no handicap for marriage-bent couples here—for two more days at least.

Pleased by increased fees resulting from his half-price rates for August, Justice Alvah Brassfield said today he would marry couples free for the rest of the month.

"My August cut-rate plan has been a success," he said, "and now I'm going to give couples wanting to marry a break."

Don't Go to St. Louis Without Your Shoes

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—William Ister, police said today, is a man who would swap his shoes for a drink of whisky. In fact, they said, every indication is that he did.

Trainmen told officers Ister apparently closed such a deal on a stop at Gasconade, Mo., last night. He was arrested by Union Station police, jolted by the sight of Ister's padding bare-footed up from the train sheds.

Broadway + + By Ed. Sullivan

Broadway Looking Glass.

New York, Aug. 29.

On November 3, 1935, Jimmy Walker was elected to New York's City Hall . . . He came into office with a fanfare of bugles, acclaimed by Broadway and Park avenue as the people's choice . . . Almost ten years later, to the month, Jimmy Walker will return to New York from England, where he has been in exile for three years . . . The 54-year-old prodigal will return to a typically emotional Broadway reception . . . The very ones who deserted the sinking Walker ship most quickly will be the loudest-voiced when his ship comes in from England . . . The very ones who used his friendship as a cloak for their burglaries of the city will act most pompously at the dock . . . Looking down at the pier, on what the feature writers call a "sea of faces," Walker will be able to read his whole career in the faces upturned toward him . . . He did a lot of nice things for a lot of people . . . They did little for him, except get him into trouble, for he never examined himself or his friends closely enough.

* * * *

There was vast carelessness and unconcern in Jimmy Walker's make-up, but no deep-seated evil . . . He was impulsive, reckless, a bad executive . . . He was, on the other hand, as loyal as the day is long, gracious, charming, a spellbinding, witty talker . . . The reason for his vast popularity was that Jimmy Walker somehow or other seemed to be New York brought to life in one person . . . He was typical of the skyscraper buildings, the lights of Broadway, the roar of the subways, the swank of Park avenue . . . To him, political life was a song, and during his heyday, all of New York's motley groups joined in singing it with him . . . The wealthy admired his wit, the poor admired his insistence that the 5-cent subway fare be retained . . . That sounds like the description of a charlatan, but he was never a rogue . . . It was unfortunate that he became New York's Mayor . . . He should have been stationed on the city's outskirts to greet the incoming visitors as Pa Knick's ambassador of good will, free of responsibility.

* * * *

Had times remained prosperous, Jimmy Walker would have lasted out his term and retired in all his glamour . . . But things started going from bad to worse and when the economic pressure is on, the taxpayers become discontented and inquisitive . . . Samuel Seabury picked the psychological moment to lay the whip across Jimmy's shoulders . . . No investigation ever was timed so perfectly . . . But that is all water under the bridge . . . At 51, Jimmy retired from office with an angry blast at Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . At 54, Jimmy returns to New York after three years in exile, and Gov. Roosevelt is now President Roosevelt . . . I wonder what thoughts will be in Walker's mind as he rides up the bay and looks again at the city of which he was completely king?

Notes: Tip to ship news photogs: Jenny Dolly and her husband, Bernard Vinissky will meet the S. S. Berengaria when it arrives September 3 . . . She's coming from Chicago to meet her two adopted youngsters . . . The Charles Levine Reno situation, carried here, was confirmed by the papers . . . Jack Kapps, closest friend of Victor Young, the band leader, asserts that malicious troublemakers circulated the report of his marriage to Lee Wiley . . . The item was planted in three Broadway columns on the same day . . . Ted Fio Rito will go into the Hotel New Yorker . . . Ozzie Nelson goes into the Lexington . . . Charlie Carlisle, the tenor, and Lois Ravel are blazing . . . Aside to Virginia Paxton: It didn't appear here . . . When are you and Paul Sabin going to the preacher? . . . They tell me that one of the Roosevelt youngsters may wed into the Trumbull family, and become a brother-in-law of John Coolidge.

Add trends: The gardenia trade having collapsed, youngsters now station themselves at the important blocks and when cars halt in traffic, the kids step out with a bit of chamois and clean off your car quickly . . . They work with amazing speed . . . Tips range from 10 cents to a quarter.

As a result of this column's poll, Fox will release the Will Rogers pictures posthumously . . . This letter from Walt Jones was typical of the public reaction! "When an engineer dies, we don't tear down his structures—when a poet dies, we don't destroy his words—when an artist dies, we don't rip up his canvases, for their work is their gift to the world. Will Rogers' gift to the world was laughter and happiness. So I feel, Ed, that we should be permitted to see his pictures and share in the happiness which is his gift to us." The ayes have it and I think Rogers would be pleased.

Sunday's Hike Of Wanderbird Takes in Falls

Jaunt in Nearby Virginia Includes Rapids Along Dead Run.

By Robert Shosteck.

The chief points of interest on Sunday's Wanderbirds' jaunt in nearby Virginia will be the scenic falls and rapids along Dead Run, Eagle Rock and the Soapstone quarry along the riverside trail, and Snake Hollow, where the hikers will go in for a swim if warm weather prevails. The region between Dead and Turkey runs is famous hazelnut country and is well worth traversing for those who do not lose their bearings.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on this five-mile hike will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. for the bus ride to Dead Run Bridge on the Georgetown-Leesburg Turnpike. The round trip fare will be 35 cents and reservations must be made at Na. 4200 by midnight Saturday. Bring lunch, a cup for water, and your swim suit if you intend to go in off Snake Hollow.

Start at Crossing.

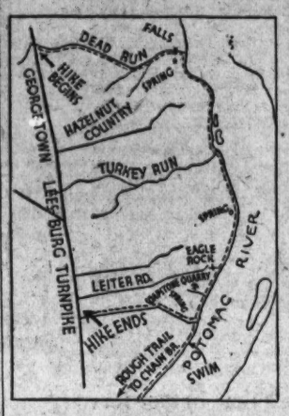
We leave the buses at the Dead Run crossing and follow this stream through rolling meadows and pastures. About a mile downstream the run abruptly enters a forge and dashes turbulently along in a series of rapids. The steep slopes are covered with a dense brush of mountain laurel, but the trail along the creek is open and easy. Near the mouth there is a drop of nearly 50 feet over a short series of rapids. To the left and below this miniature falls is a spring.

Turkey Run, our first goal, is about a mile down the riverside trail. The path along the narrow alluvial plain is unobstructed and easy, except for a few short stretches of rocky terrain where the trail may be somewhat overgrown. The flood plain along the route is interesting botanically, since one can find several varieties of hickory nuts, walnuts, and pawpaws, and also the attractive berries of the false Solomon's Seal and the Jack-in-the-Pulpit.

Lunch at Spring.

The hikers will lunch at a spring less than a half mile beyond Turkey Run, and then continue to Eagle Rock, a promontory which juts out into the river and offers a fine view of the Potomac valley. The old soapstone quarry is but a short distance from Eagle Rock, and is located up a deeply cut and narrow ravine. It is not visible from the riverside trail since it is about 200 yards up. The ruins of the old sawing mill are still in place. An abundance of cut soapstone remains and one can find samples which can be carved with a knife like chalk.

Returning to the trail along the river, the group will continue to a broad ravine known locally as Snake Hollow. The writer has so far been unable to find any snakes in this otherwise pleasant valley.



Here the group will stop for a swim in the river, utilizing any of the tumbledown cottages for bathhouses. After an hour's swim, the group will follow the trail up the hollow to a dirt road which leads into the turnpike. Here the buses will pick up the hikers and return to the city by about 6:30.

Extension of Hike.

Veteran Wanderbirds who want a longer and rougher trip through very rocky and picturesque country may continue along the riverside trail to within a half mile of Chain Bridge, then turn uphill and a short distance cross-country to the turnpike. The bridge and the street car line in the District are but a half mile off.

The autumn hike schedule, which includes a number of new trips, will be distributed on this trip by Messrs. Peel and Gaddis, the hike leaders. If you can not come out this Sunday, write to The Post for your copy.

City's Attempt To Get Airport Balked by Club

Martinsburg Aviators Refuse to Recognize 5-Year Option.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.—The City of Martinsburg's attempt to purchase Shepherd Fitld, local airport, from the Berkeley Aviation Club in order that improvements might be made through the use of Federal funds, struck a snag last night when the Aviation Club refused to turn over the field to city authorities contrary to a five-year option held by the city.

A little over a year ago, an option on the airport was granted to the city by the club in order that Federal funds to the extent of about $18,000 would be expended on improvements. According to this option, the city was given the right to take over the field at any time on the assumption of a $3,000 debt to a local bank and the payment for any improvements that might be made by the club after the option was granted. Now thec lub contends that the improvements made by the Federal Government should be paid for by the city.

The city council does not have the necessary funds to make the purchase, which would amount to about $20,000, so unless an agreement is reached within the next few days the airport will lose the approximately $40,000 promised to it for improvements by the Works Progress Administration. The deadline for transferring the property to the City of Martinsburg is September 12, 1935. WPA authorities have refused to make any of the expenditures on the field unless the field is in the possession of the city government by that time.

J. O. Henson, president of the aviation club, has been representing the flying organization in the negotiations and says the only way the club will agree to the taking over by the city of the airport is for the city to have the field run by a boardof of governors appointed with approval of the club. This, the club says, is to be done in order to keep the running of the field out of municipal politics. The council has refused to comply with this proposal and has ordered City Attorney H. A. Downs to ask the club for the immediate transfer of the title of the property under the terms of the option.

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY
Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills. Advt.

WASHINGTON delegates to the national convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes will leave for Yellowstone Park at 4:30 today from Union Station.

BAKER.

Members of N. F. F. E. locals here will meet with a group from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and other Eastern points, to make up a special train party. They will be joined by numerous other convention-bound Federal employes at Minneapolis for the final leg of the trip.

Among those in the party leaving here are Ulrey J. Biller, vice president, and Charles J. Newell, the Park Service employe who is making the trip as a guest of the N. F. F. E. unions here for his successful membership enrollment.

National Vice Presidents Charles Wiegand, of Baltimore, and John Fitzgerald, of New York, will join the group here, as will National Organizers John D. Cloud and Miss Matilda Lindsay.

The bi-annual convention opens Labor Day at Old Faithful Inn., Yellowstone National Park. After several days of business the employe-delegates will visit the wonders of the park and return within the 15-day leave period now allotted.

Principal business at the conclave will consist of plans for a campaign for preservation and extension of the merit system and routine organization matters.

Almost all departments and independent offices in Washington are represented by the following delegates:

What Price War?

We pay for ghastly war
With the currency of life;
And the exchange rate is costly
In international strife.
We place in the exchequer
Severed limbs, and sightless eyes;
Gassed lungs, and shattered minds
Wherein no reason lies.

We pay for deady war
With the gold of men's dreams;
With the hopes they lost forever,
And their agonized screams.
We pay with mothers' tears,
With the broken hearts of wives,
With the need of helping orphans,
As our soldiers give their lives.

Seek Job Protection.

Plans were mapped last night by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians to save the jobs of scores of employes working on the Coast and Geodetic Survey staff. The meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A.

The original appropriation for the mapping project expired last June. A supplementary allotment to carry on the work already has been expended. The entire field staff has been dismissed and, unless new funds are forthcoming, employes in the Washington office are faced with dismissal at the end of this month.

Mrs. Clinton B. Uttley, wife of the superintendent of the Postoffice Service, has returned to Washington after a visit with their son in St. Louis.

FAILURE to extend the classified civil service and at the same time exempting employes of many of the new and permanent agencies from application of the civil service law is deplored by the National League of Women Voters as the "most unfortunate action of Congress."

"The league especially regrets the failure to pass any of the bills which would place all postmasters in the classified service," a league leader said last night.

"Also, the league regrets the failure to repeal the married persons clause of the economy act, and the exemption of employes of the AAA, the HOLC and other agencies from application of the civil service law. The persistent recurrence of attempts, in the main unsuccessful, to increase the number of presidential appointments which must be ratified by the Senate is evidence of a tendency which should not develop."

It was indicated that the fight for Federal personnel reform will be carried on actively throughout the country by the league during the adjournment of Congress.

A complete course in physical training and expert instructions in jiu jitsu are now included in the intensive training received by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Sirovich to Speak.

Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, will be among the Capitol Hill leaders who will address the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes in Cincinnati, beginning September 9.

Miss Helen Munroe, Smithsonian Institution, is recovering from a fractured ankle at Garfield Hospital.

Eerie Light Flickers Traced to Fisherman

Allentown, Pa. (U.P.).—Sinister flickers of light flashed through the trees.

First here, then there, the eerie rays flitted about the church lawn. It was 1:30 a. m.

Residents cautiously peered from bedroom windows, awed by the weird lights. Finally someone called the police.

Officers rushed to the scene. Slowly they stole up behind a mysterious prowler with a flashlight in his hands.

It was a fisherman looking for worms.

Welding

. . . the best way to make a perfect union of two pieces of metal is by welding them together.

. . . and the best way to get a more pleasing flavor and a better taste in a cigarette is by welding together the different types of tobacco . . .

That is just what we do in making CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes—the three types of mild ripe home-grown tobaccos, that is tobaccos grown in this country, are welded together. Then they are welded with aromatic Turkish.

When these tobaccos are welded together you get a combined flavor which is entirely different from any one type of tobacco.

It is this welding of the right amounts of the right kind of tobaccos that makes CHESTERFIELD a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

Chesterfield . . . the cigarette that's MILDER
Chesterfield . . . the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

Belasco Still Preening Self for Opening of "Loves of a Dictator" Saturday

Worthy Picture Is Selected as Initial Offering

Warners and Radio Busy Studios; "East Lynne" in Third Week.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"Loves of a Dictator" has Clive Brook, looking like a French revolutionist, a very pretty Madeleine Carroll, an adequate plot and good photography. But, above all, it has a chap named Emlyn Williams, who gallops off with the acting honors.

It would probably be more proper, however, to emphasize not the picture, but the house in which it received an advance screening yesterday for the benefit of the town's dramatic critics. For the house was the tradition-steeped Belasco, whose mellow interior has been undergoing an appreciable, if not drastic, change during the last couple of months preparatory to reopening, which is set for next Saturday morning.

From a vantage point in the mezzanine, we noticed that the boxes have been curtailed and miscellaneous other alterations made, although the wall quotations have been permitted to remain. The seats felt softer, logically enough, for every one has been cleaned, repaired and realigned.

Carpenters and electricians were busily at work on the stage right up to the moment the house was darkened for the first local screening of "Loves of a Dictator," the Gaumont-British picture starring the British Brook and the British Madeleine. Sufficient labors remain to keep the carpenters and electricians occupied almost up until 11:30 a. m. Saturday, when the redecorated Belasco is given up again to the public.

"Loves of a Dictator."

As we intimated in the beginning, the inaugural attraction is by no means a great film, but rather a pleasing strip of celluloid whose principal distinction is a sharp performance by Emlyn Williams in the role of King Christian VII of Denmark. We hope we will not be long in making another appearance.

The year is 1776 and the king has taken unto himself a bride in the person of the English Princess Caroline, the union being wholly one of state convenience. Clive Brook is an obscure physician in Hamburg, whither King Christian travels incognito after a childish tiff with his new queen on their wedding night.

Unable to hold his liquor, imbibed in a gay tavern, the 20-year-old monarch keels over and is revived by Dr. Struensee, who prescribes against rank youngsters' (the doctor doesn't know he is addressing the King of Denmark) indulging in wine, women and song.

Impressed by this sage adviser, the king invites his benefactor to accompany him back to court. Dr. Struensee, an opportunist, accepts. Then, while proceeding to restore the people's faith in their ruler and at the same time making himself dictator, he falls in love with the queen in a restrained, undemonstrative way. She returns his affection so effectively, albeit equally restrained, that the dictator loses his head.

All in all, a satisfying hour's or so entertainment to which this sketchy description can not do justice. More of "Loves of a Dictator" anon.

Now that Jimmy Walker, former playboy Mayor of New York City, has been given a clean bill of health by the Department of Justice, there is talk that he may succeed to the acting mantle laid down by the late Will Rogers. We don't think it will go beyond the talk stage.

Ready for Delivery.

An announcement arrives bearing the news that Warner Bros.-First National is operating far ahead of production schedule, with 10 features completed and awaiting release, five pictures "on th fire" and seven others in preparation. First of this list to be seen here will be "Bright Lights," starring Joe E. Brown with Ann Dvorak and Patricia Ellis. It will play the Earle.

The fall should bring, either at the Earle or Warner's Metropolitan, the following attractions, all of which have been completed:

"The Goose and the Gander," with Kay Francis, George Brent and Genevieve Tobin; "The Little Big Shot," with Sybil Jason, Robert Armstrong and Glenda Farrell; "The Pay-Off," with James Dunn, Claire Dodd and Patricia Ellis; "Dr. Socrates," starring Paul Muni with Ann Dvorak; "I Live for Love," which introduces Everett Marshall with Dolores Del Rio; "Living Up to Lizzie," with Margaret Lindsay and Warren Hull; "Moonlight on the Prairie," with Dick Foran and Sheila Manners; "The Murder of Dr. Harrigan," with Kay Linaker and Ricardo Cortez, and "Shipmates Forever," the Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler production made at Annapolis.

Roundup of Miscellany.

RKO-Radio also would like the world to know its studios are plenty busy, too . . . "Top Hat," its latest product which Hardie Meakin will welcome into Keith's Sunday with open arms, is finished, but there are six other important pictures in production . . . In them Lily Pons makes her film debut, Ginger Rogers has her first solo starring role, Katherine Hepburn plays "Sylvia Scarlett," Hugh Herbert gets together with Helen Broderick and Roger Pryor in "To Beat the Band," Wheeler and Woolsey resume their crazy antics and Barbara Stanwyck makes something of a comeback as "Annie Oakley" . . . Lieut. Comdr. Herman Halland, U. S. N., has been assigned by the Navy Department to assist the Samuel Goldwyn studios in preparing Miriam Hopkins' forthcoming "Navy Born" . . . Norma Shearer, back on F street tomorrow in "Smilin' Through," was born in Westmount, a suburb of Montreal . . . Anyone remember her first picture? . . . It was known as "The Wasters."

The Willard Players opened their third four-day week in "East Lynne" at the National Press Club auditorium last night. Returning to his role of professor of atmospheric music and accompanist extraordinary, Walter Studdiford scored the same success that was his last year atop the Willard Hotel when he pounded out tunes for "The Drunkard."

"Androcles and the Lion," by George Bernard Shaw, will be given a repeat performance by the Community Players tonight in the Sylvan Theater, Monument Grounds. The Bartfield Players, directed by Esther Galbraith, will offer a postponed "Romeo and Juliet" in the same bucolic setting next Wednesday. Their production was rained out on August 20.

A season of outstanding hits is promised by the Pierce Hall Players, who are planning to hold a meeting next week.

Metropolitan

"THE IRISH IN US." First National picturization of a story idea by Frank Orsatti, with screen play by Earl Baldwin; featuring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, and Frank McHugh, with Olivia de Havilland, Allen Jenkins, Mary Gordon, J. Farrell MacDonald, Thomas Jackson, and Harvey Perry. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With James Cagney as a fight promoter, with Pat O'Brien as a policeman and with Frank McHugh as a fireman, and all mixed up in the same story, anything could happen, and when this trio starts to demonstrate "The Irish In Us"—well, just about everything does happen.

Then add to these attributes those of Mary Gordon, as the dear old mother of these battling brothers; the ingenuous charm of Olivia de Havilland, as the love interest in the Cagney-O'Brien existence, and the dumb comedy of Allen Jenkins, as the goofy pugilist, and you have a setup for a fast-moving comedy-drama of the first water. Rest assured, you to whom this pleasure is yet to come, the most sanguine expectations will here be realized.

Supplementing this delightful commentary on Hibernian domesticity and filial affection are three short subjects sufficiently diverting not materially to detract from it. First is "What's the Idea," with Lew Pollack playing a number of his better-known compositions, assisted by the Cavaliers, Helen Ware and Charles Carlisle. Second is a Pop Eye cartoon, "For Better of Worser," which in this particularly series of cartoonal divertissements is just that. And last, there are the combined releases of the Universal and Paramount News reels.

Mother Love at the Palace

Freddie Bartholomew, who has a minimum of the irritating mannerisms possessed by most child actors, is Greta Garbo's son in "Anna Karenina," coming into the Palace tomorrow. Here they are shown together in one of the tenderest moments in the film.

Variety Marks New Schedule Of Film Houses

'Dictator' Reopens Belasco; Shearer in Revival; 'Top Hat.'

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

Interest is attached to the reopening of the Belasco Theater Saturday, not as a legitimate house, of course, but in the same capacity in which it was operated last winter—a movie citadel presenting foreign-made productions chiefly. Thoroughly redecorated and overhauled, the Belasco will offer first "Loves of a Dictator," with Clive Brook and Madeleine Carroll. This is a Toeplitz production released by Gaumont-British. The setting is Denmark in the eighteenth century and virtually the entire action is laid in the court of King Christian VII. Selected short subjects will augment the feature offering.

• • • •

Greta Garbo shares starring honors with Frederic March in "Anna Karenina," the second big M.-G-M hit of the new season, which succeeds "China Seas" at the Palace tomorrow. Authentically based on the immortal classic by Count Tolstoi, the new film presents Garbo in a profound drama set against a background of imperial Russia at the height of Czarist glory 50 years ago. Clarence Brown directed. In the supporting cast are Freddie Bartholomew, Basil Rathbone, May Robson, Maureen O'Sullivan, Reginald Denny, Reginald Owen, Cora Sue Collins and Joan Marsh. The remainder of the program will consist of new events, a comedy and other short subjects.

• • • •

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell are conspirators again in "We're in the Money," principal screen fare at the Earle for the week beginning tomorrow. The two blonde stars are employed, in this comedy, as process servers by an absent-minded attorney, Homer Bronson (Hugh Herbert). Among their victims are Ross Alexander, being sued for breach of promise; Man Mountain Dean, sought as a witness in the same case; Phil Regan, Hobart Cavanagh, and Henry O'Neill. Johnny Perkins, the rotund comedian, will preside over the vaudeville bill, presenting the 32 Roxyettes, precision dancers; Vera Van, torch singer; the Hartmans, dance satirists, and Park and Clifford, athletic individualists. The usual newsreel and short subjects are included in the screen portion.

• • • •

Radio stars dominate both the stage and screen offerings at the Fox. Burns and Allen, who have made their greatest reputations on the air, although they are seasoned vaudevillians and screen performers, play the leads in the comedy, "Here Comes Cookie." Don Bestor, radio playmate of Jack Benny, and his orchestra, will head the stage show. George Barbier, as a millionaire; Betty Furness, as his daughter in love with a gigolo, and Gracie Allen herself as another daughter who gets the money, help make "Here Comes Cookie" a hilarious, nonsensical film. Don Bestor will present as soloists Neil Buckley and Joe Lynn. Sammy Cohen, screen comic; Bernice Martin, musical comedy singer, and the Monroe brothers are other stage features. Also there will be the Phil Lampkin overture, news events and short comedy.

• • • •

Boasting an Irving Berlin score, a renewal of the successful Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers partnership and the celebrated "Piccolino," "Top Hat" make its local debut at RKO-Keiths Sunday, with "Alice Adams" remaining through Saturday. In support of the costars will be Helen Broderick, Edward Everett Horton, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore. Mark Sandrich, who directed "The Gay Divorcee," took over the same duties for "Top Hat." With the exception of Miss Broderick, all of those named appeared with Astaire and Miss Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee." Advance notices acclaim the "Piccolino" as a more spectacular dance than the "Carioca" and the "Continental," earlier hits of the now established team of Fred and Ginger. The customary short subjects will supplement this long-awaited attraction.

• • • •

Brought back by popular demand, demonstrated by the receipt of hundreds of letters, "Smilin' Through" comes to the Columbia for a week beginning Friday. Again Norma Shearer will be seen in the role of a girl brave enough to defy life for the man she loved. Pressing her for acting honors will be Frederic March and Leslie Howard. Others featured in this M-G-M film, which was directed by Sidney Franklin, are O. P. Heggie, Ralph Forbes, Beryl Mercer, David Torrence, Margaret Sedden and Forrester Harvey. News, a comedy and short features are also programmed.

• • • •

"The Irish in Us" is back at the Metropolitan, having opened yesterday, for a special repeat engagement. The Warner Bros. comedy featuring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien proved a hit at the Earle a few weeks ago. Cagney and O'Brien are supported by Mary Gordon, Frank McHugh, Olivia de Havilland, Allen Jenkins and others. Short subjects and a generous news reel round out the offering.

• • • •

Finals in the contest to find a "Miss Washington," who will compete in the Atlantic City beauty pageant next month, will be held at Chevy Chase Lake tomorrow night. Thirteen girls remain in the competition.

These are the last remaining days of the Glen Echo Park season. At midnight Monday the amusement center's activities will be shut down until next spring.

$5,000 Suit Filed For Auto Injuries

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 29.—Asking $5,000 damages, James Lowery, of Frostburg, through his mother, Mrs. Jean Lowery, has sued Edgar Kolb, of Springdale street, Cumberland. The youth, employed at the Celanese plant, claims he was injured permanently July 13 in an automobile collision on Dingle hill. He accuses Kolb of negligence and reckless driving. Edward J. Ryan is attorney for the plaintiff.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, Aug. 29.

CLARK GABLE is putting on a shirt, in fact, ready to button it, when Jean Harlow enters the room. The next shot, which is taken from outside the room, explains Seymour Greenspan, shows Miss Harlow walking out and Gable again putting on a shirt. It seems that Miss Harlow got Gable so excited that he forgot he had put on a shirt already. Either that or Miss Harlow got Mr. Greenspan so excited that he got the shirt a little confused.

Also writing about "China Seas," Rose Weitzman insists that the pirates who are taying to get Gable to tell them where the gold is, torture him by applying "the boot" to his right foot, and later when we see Gable he carries a cane in his right hand, which means that his left foot is hurt, for it's impossible to carry a cane in the right hand and drag the right foot.

"Didn't anyone connected with the taking of that flicker ever have a sore foot?"

• • • •

James Cagney pulls the telephone box off the dressing room wall just before the prize fight in "The Irish in Us." George Harkin, who claims to be a telephone destroyer himself, says that in the flicker the receiver wire is attached to the wall instead of to the telephone box. There are movie fans who know about everything, even the right way to wrong a telephone. A more legitimate flaw, in many flickers, is the person who picks up a dial phone and gets the operator without dialing.

• • • •

WALTER KING and O. P. Heggie in "Ginger" leave Jane Withers and are seen riding in an automobile. It is supposed to be raining heavily. Yet, looking through the window of the auto, says Peter Colone, it is a bright sunny day and people are seen walking without their coats on.

This is an instance, probably, where the transparency shot didn't match the scenario. Mr. King and Mr. Heggie sat in the auto on the set as the scenery was projected on the screen behind them; only it seems, according to Peter, that they got the wrong scenery.

In "Lady Tubbs," Alice Brady and a number of performers are sitting in a roof garden and, writes Tom Lowery, as you look over the ledge of the roof garden you see one large building. The next scene, when you look over the same ledge of the roof garden, you see many buildings.

• • • •

After leaving the party with Walter in "Alice Adams," Katharine Hepburn wears the long raincoat while walking from the truck to the front door of the house. Miss Hepburn opens the door, writes T. Taistra, and as she steps inside, the raincoat has disappeared and she's wearing only the very short jacket.

This scene was shot on different days. The rain sequences were done one day and her entrance into the house on another. Miss Hepburn forgot about the raincoat and the script girl did also.

But Miss Hepburn didn't forget to give a great performance.

• • • •

DICK POWELL is a stowaway on an ocean liner, sailing for Italy, in "Broadway Gondolier." William Kitay claims that the flash of the boat starting and the flash of the boat docking make it very evident that Powell arrived in Italy on a different one on which he sailed.

This is not unusual in flickers. For scenes of boats sailing or in midocean stock shots are used. The director uses whatever stock shots are available in the studio's film library. These shots are necessary only to continue the action; the director doesn't believe the movie audience will inspect the boats—but many of them do.

A Royal Victim.

At her marriage to Prince Leopold of Belgium, Princess Astrid of Sweden won the affections of her adopted country by her grace and charm. From the day that the Prince became the monarch, she held those affections through her simplicity and force of character. By law, the head of the Belgian state is not the King of Belgium; he is the Belgians' King. One may say with precision that by acclamation Astrid became their Queen.

Twice in the past two years, sudden death has entered the democratic court of Brussels. On each occasion the Belgians have been impoverished by the loss of someone they sincerely loved. In February of 1934 the adventurous Albert—that ruler who had braved German shells and whose defense of his people had made him their idol—died in a feat of rock-climbing which, in the past, he had again and again performed with perfect safety. Now, 18 months later, the wife of his adventurous heir is killed in an automobile accident similar to those which are recorded in every newspaper every day.

The lovely waters of the Lake of Lucerne have witnessed many a tragedy. They have never before witnessed a tragedy that brought more widespread sorrow than this.

Politics Out Of Place.

Reports that certain members of Congress are bringing pressure upon the District Commissioners to secure the promotion of Capt. Holmes to the position vacated by Inspector Headley is a discouraging sequel to the recent crime investigation. The most emphatic recommendation in the revised report of the Crime Committee called for the elimination of political influence in the Police Department. If it is true that some members of the committee making this report are now trying to dictate the choice of a favored candidate, their action is doubly reprehensible.

The choice of a new inspector is said to have been narrowed to Capt. Bobo and Capt. Holmes. It is not likely that any member of Congress knows which of the two men is best fitted for this responsibility. Recommendations from Capitol Hill are inevitably subject to suspicion of political bias. For that simple reason they should be completely disregarded. In fact, if the merit system were operating perfectly an attempt to secure political influence would put any candidate for promotion under a handicap.

So long as the District government retains its present form it may be impossible entirely to eliminate national politics from its personnel problems. But the pernicious effects of political interference in the Police Department might be minimized by adoption of the simple rule advocated by the Crime Committee. It suggested that the superintendent of police be required to make public any political indorsement for a member of the department. Of course, the ruling should apply to written or oral requests from Capitol Hill. Under that arrangement it is certain that fewer indorsements would be made, and those received would probably be less influential.

The fact that the Commissioners required Inspector Headley to resign suggests that they are eager to rise above the implications of the "gentlemen's agreement." If so, their next logical steps are to select his successor on merit alone and then require full publicity for all political indorsements in the future.

How About Grade Crossings?

The White House announcement that no work-relief allotments will be made after September 17 coincides with a grade-crossing collision near Hagerstown in which four lives were lost. Though seemingly unrelated, these two items in the current news have a vital connection. For this new order, intended to speed up the spending of $4,000,000,000 to create jobs, may result in the elimination of many larger projects, including grade crossings.

Tragedy lurks at every meeting place of rails and highway. Congress recognized the urgent need of minimizing these hazards when it earmarked $800,000,000 of the work-relief fund for roads, highways, streets and grade-crossing elimination. From nearby Kensington, where five persons were killed in a locomotive-automobile crash in 1927, and Rockville, where 14 children lost their lives recently when a train plowed through a school bus, come reasonable demands for funds to eliminate death traps. These requests, supported by major tragedies, are typical of pelas from every part of the country.

A large part of the fund available for projects in this category might well be spent on separating highways from railway tracks. If these undertakings are eliminated from the WPA program because of capricious desires to spend money faster, a great opportunity for real service will be lost. It would be interesting to hear WPA officials attempt to justify on any basis of sound public policy the steady diversion of funds from substantial projects of this type to made work of the CWA variety.

Colby's Trial Balloon.

Bainbridge Colby's attempt to organize an anti-New Deal movement among conservative Democrats is a logical outcome of the course pursued by the present Administration. Many Democrats, including a galaxy of former party leaders, share the dissatisfaction of the former Secretary of State. Whether they can or even wish to organize an effective third party to oppose President Roosevelt is, however, quite a different question.

As Mr. Colby says, Democrats of the Jeffersonian school "will not condone the repudiation of their party's pledges." When the 1932 platform was written at Chicago the party had not cast off its "historic devotion to constitutional democracy." Since that time a novel, though still somewhat confused, philosophy of government has been evolved under the caption of the New Deal. In thus departing from the traditional policies of his party, Mr. Roosevelt must have realized that he would lose the support of many who can not shift their principles with the same facility.

Possibly Mr. Colby will attempt to rally conservative Democrats around the forgotten platform of 1932. That, of course, would be an embarrassing situation for the Administration to face. But it is yet to be demonstrated that Mr. Colby's trial balloon will arouse any widespread enthusiasm. The disgruntled followers of Jefferson realize that there is no chance of substituting a candidate of their own for Mr. Roosevelt in 1936. Consequently any concerted movement within the Democratic Party against the President would redound to the benefit of the Republican candidate, an alternative less pleasing to some of the dissenters than would be a return of the present Administration.

In these circumstances the most that can be expected of Mr. Colby's move to organize a constitutionalist party, and William Randolph Hearst's attempt to boom Al Smith as its candidate, is the establishment of another Liberty League. The dissenting leaders obviously want an effective agency of protest. It would be premature to suppose that they are as yet prepared to split the Democratic Party.

Nevertheless, this disaffection on the right, when added to the revolt of Huey ong, Gov. Talmadge et al., on the left, is going to cause Mr. Farley great and growing concern during the next year. For the problem which the Administration must face is not so much the organization of a formidable third party as defection from and division among the forces which carried the election in 1932. Remembering the results of the Bull Moose schism in their own camp, the Republicans are naturally elated over every tendency to throw the Democratic Party into a similar predicament.

It is to be noted that development of distinct factions in the majority party will inevitably tend to confuse the issues of the 1936 campaign. All the more important, therefore, will be the selection of the Republican candidate and the working out of a clear and unequivocal minority platform. For the interests of the country will best be served if it is permitted to make a forthright choice between the New Deal and some other positive plan of reconstruction.

District Health Centers.

After a long period of neglect, the District is witnessing the gradual development of a systematic public health program. Dr. Ruhland has moved with precision from one project to another. First he induced the Commissioners to approve, and Congress to appropriate, funds for employment of a director of the tuberculosis fight and additional public health nurses. Then he secured WPA funds for a tuberculosis survey. Now he is seeking approval of a plan for construction of six public health centers through which the improved facilities at his command may be more effectively utilized in the fight against disease.

Not all of Dr. Ruhland's requests have been granted. He is nevertheless going ahead with a comprehensive program on the assumption that gradually those controlling the city's purse strings will be converted to the necessity of more adequate public health service. Soon he should be able to show demonstrable results from the increased activity of the Health Department. And this in turn should stimulate more interest in and support for his program.

Dr. Ruhland should not be discouraged by the denial of work relief funds for the construction of health centers. The National Resources Board has spent a great deal of time and money studying similar useful projects that could be undertaken as a means of creating jobs, only to have its work virtually disregarded by the Works Progress Administration. The emphasis of the WPA is not upon the social value of projects, but on the creation of temporary jobs. Under that agency's narrow restrictions the denial of funds is coming to be almost a criterion of its desirability as a community undertaking.

Funds for the health centers should, however, be found. Unless the WPA can be induced to adopt a more intelligent policy, the problem must be fairly faced by the Commissioners in making up next year's budget.

Watch The NYA.

Some months ago the Federal Office of Education suggested that local educational authorities should extend the use of their school facilities in developing a combined work, education, and recreation program in behalf of the unemployed youth of the country. The suggestion of J. W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, was that money appropriated from the work-relief funds for this purpose should "be released through the local channels to the boards of education in the local communities upon presentation of acceptable plans for engaging the idle youth in their areas in programs of constructive activity."

Mr. Studebaker pointed out that this would place on local school boards the same responsibility now carried by college and university administrations in connection with the student aid program. The only substantial criticism of the proposal was that it would have to be carefully safeguarded to prevent a wholly undesirable extension of Federal control over local elementary school education.

All the stages of the degeneracy through which the Studebaker plan has passed are not clear. The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, acting on the assumption that youths up to the age of 25 can for its purposes be called "children," was certainly partly instrumental in the development which has taken place. But whatever the off-stage maneuvers, the fact is that the National Youth Administration, with an allocation of $50,000,000 from the WPA, has emerged with emphatic support for the questionable side of the original scheme, and a comprehensive disregard for its constructive aspects.

Dr. Harold G. Campbell, superintendent of the New York school system, is now making it clear that he will refuse NYA grants unless they are accompanied by a guarantee that local school authorities will have a free hand in their use. Officials of the NYA reply that his fears of Federal domination of the New York schools are "perfectly ridiculous." Yet NYA directors meeting in Washington a few days ago were heard to declare that their instructions seem to point to eventual federalization of local school systems.

If the New Deal is sincere in its desire to help unemployed youths, it can do much to assist local school authorities, and to integrate their efforts with the employment exchange system, the CCC, and other established agencies. But if this is merely another boondoggling program with the ulterior aim of undermining the independence of local education, it should be fought tooth and nail by everyone worthy of the name of educator.

A Dirty Job Well Done.

With the transfer of John Hamilton's identification cards from the working files of the Department of Justice to the drawer labeled "Dead," the case of the Dillinger gang is closed. For J. Edgar Hoover and his colleagues the conclusion of this job must be a matter of great satisfaction. For the Nation it is a great relief.

Not that Hamilton or any of the rest of the trigger-mad crew caused many citizens to fear for their personal safety. But the brazen insouciance and mocking ease with which the gang robbed and murdered, and then escaped, gave many a thoughtful person pause in contemplating the future of a country helpless in the face of such anti-social elements. Dillinger and his gang became symbols of all that was degenerate and unwholesome in the United States.

Accordingly, it bolsters national self-confidence of the Nation to hear of the discovery of the bullet-ridden body of the last of the gang in an Illinois gravel pit. For its heartening and valuable reassurances to public morale the Federal Bureau of Investigation is to be thanked, and roundly congratulated.

The Gideons report that it takes about 25,000 Bibles annually to replace those stolen from hotel rooms. On which side of the ledger does the recording angel enter the act of stealing a Bible?

It seems reasonable that a person could regain consciousness who had been frozen in a cake of ice. There have been cases where a debtor has been revived after he attended a conference of his bankers.

"A person who is tired is insane," declares a college professor. Perhaps so, but he was a little crazy to begin with, or he would never have worked until he became tired.

From Jobs To Dole.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The Administration's five billion works-relief fund was heralded as a move in a big way to take men off relief and put them to work.

In California it is having the opposite effect. By order of State Administrator Frank Y. McLaughlin, a quarter of a million heads of families are to be taken off work and put back on the dole. A general order of "down tools" has been issued to all county relief directors to discontinue all SERA relief work projects, except a few that can not be immediately discontinued on the score of public safety, such as open sewer trenches and the like.

The reason for this order is that the money in hand must be conserved for food until Washington approves works progress projects that have been knocking around the various bureaucracies.

But it is a howling absurdity that the cumbersomeness of the plan to take unemployed off the dole and put them to work should result in taking them off work and putting them on the dole.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Statesman's Stature.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: During the past session of Congress hundreds of new laws were passed. In the so-called must laws demanded by the Administration there are countless regulations which will restrict the activities of millions of citizens. This legislation has arbitrarily favored certain groups of citizens as against other groups, and in passing these discriminatory statutes the Senate, collectively and individually, had very insufficient acquaintance with the substance of these innumerable new laws. Prepared by scores of Administration bureaucrats, it was a physical impossibility for the Senate to be thoroughly acquainted with all the provisions of these new laws.

But there is one great statesman in the Senate. He would not permit a discriminatory law to be passed, not while he was brave and strong. The laws wanted by the President of the United States were all right. Let the President have what he wants. But a routine bill, restoring 15 days' leave to Government employes, comes up for consideration. The great statesman from Tennessee suddenly becomes acutely aware of his prerogatives, suddenly becomes the champion of nondiscrimination, and it may be said that on this occasion he truly rose to his highest stature as a legislator. What if his objection was mere quibbling, what if it could have been easily corrected by an executive order, nevertheless, the Senator "objects."

As I am not employed by any of the executive departments of the Government, I cannot properly be accused of self-interest in the matter; but it did seem too perfect an illustration of senatorial stature to go unnoticed. Doubtless, the Senator may now return to Tennessee for a four months' vacation. Having blocked a measure which saved the Government not a penny, he is, indeed, the fearless legislator.

Advantages Of Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The National Youth Administration established by President Roosevelt June 26 is now taking active form, but judging by its "Information Primer," just released, takes another step in placing a premium on relief recipients.

Students and prospective students to be eligible for assistance by the Youth Administration "must be members of relief families." In establishing the administration Mr. Roosevelt said: "I have determined that we shall do something for the Nation's unemployed youth because we can ill afford to lose the skill and energy of these young men and women."

That is a fine declaration—a declaration that all right-thinking people will approve. But it simmers down to the practical fact that unless your son or daughter is the fortunate child of a relief family, his or her skill and energy must be lost, assuming that you are one of the millions who can afford only the bare necessities of life without having a sufficient margin to provide for educational needs.

But if you are fortunate enough to be on relief then you may have assistance to educate your children, who will in turn grow up to be worthy citizens, have their skill and energies saved for the Nation, and provide you with support in declining years.

Possibly the wag who said he could not get on relief until he bought an automobile was not so great a liar after all. C. B. R.

League For Less Noise?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The campaign which New York's Mayor is waging against noise has focused national attention on the problem. I believe the time has come for the creation of a Washington organization to make the residents of the District "noise-minded." Medical opinion is emphatic in its judgment that noise is harmful to health and working efficiency. Public officials here are working on the question, but the success of their efforts is conditioned on the support of public opinion. The united effort of the people here interested in mitigating city noises would make rapid progress possible.

I propose that we borrow New York's title and set up a Washington League for Less Noise. The District Commissioners or some other public agency would probably be willing to nominate a group of representative citizens to set up the organization. Among the objectives such an association might concentrate on are: (1) Curtailment of the use of the automobile horn both in traffic and where used to summon people from their homes (this last is widespread and serves no useful public purpose whatever), (2) prohibition of the use of the horn between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m., (3) prohibition of the use of horns other than those provided by the car manufacturer, (4) prohibition of the use of muffler cut-outs on motorcycles, and, (5) forcing solid-tired trucks to replace tires when worn out. An advisory committee composed, for example, of representatives of the Traffic Bureau, the Department of Health, and the engineering profession could help give the Washington League for Less Noise a practicable program.

Low Bank Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I refer to a news item in The Post of August 27 in regard to a cashier of a local bank being arrested for embezzlement. It is a well-known fact that banks have the reputation of paying low-scale wages. They will continue to have money embezzled until their employes are paid decent salaries.

"Runners," quite young, pull down the large sum of $50 or $60 per month and are trusted with large sums of money. One man I know was employed by one of the largest local banks for ten years. At the time it closed he was making the grand sum of $125 per month as paying teller and cashier.

The bonding companies, I believe, are to a large extent to blame for such acts as we read about every day. These companies know the small salaries paid these employes, yet they place these people under bond and in positions where the temptation is the greatest.

LEWIS E. ROBERTS.
Washington, Aug. 26.

From A Louisianan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I am from New Orleans, La., I can speak without fear of contradiction. First, let me say I want to stick to the truth in all I say. I notice the papers say that the House of Representatives is to look into Huey P. Long's art of government. I feel confident that the whole House will be greatly surprised to find such a sound business-like administration. The State has had many a Governor, and all put together have not accomplished what he has done; he made promises and fulfilled each one. His administration has been a constructive one. JOHN CLARK.
Washington, Aug. 26.

From One Student To Another.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native, voting American and as a lover of fair play, freedom of speech and conscience, may I speak just a word in defense of David Carliner? I don't know exactly what Mr. Carliner's opinions are, and I don't care. I speak merely to defend his right to those opinions and to hold them in public and unafraid and to attend any free American college while holding them. His right to do so has been questioned by one university in Washington, and he is now to be admitted to another local college provided he does not "indulge" in any "radical movements."

I am ashamed to admit that I do not have the courage of Mr. Carliner. I shall not sign my name to this letter, because I am enrolled in the George Washington University, and I hope to stay there. It is unfortunate, of course, that that great university might no longer tolerate my presence in its halls of learning should its 100 per cent American faculty and executives discover that I intend to keep my own beliefs and to follow the leadership of that forward-looking liberal, the President of the United States, who only recently urged the youth of the land to fight for needed changes in our national life. This is the university that barred Mr. Carliner, I regret to say. The university which has finally admitted this young man who pays more attention to the President of the United States than most college presidents is American University. At the latter school Mr. Carliner must carefully submerge any tendencies he may have toward speaking his mind in favor of social change, else he will get the boot there, too.

It would seem to me that both these universities have missed one important point. This: Granted that Mr. Carliner is perhaps a little too advanced in his opinions; granted that perhaps he has listened to too many soap-box orators—if he is willing to attend classes, conduct himself like a gentleman and do creditable scholastic work, why not admit him, try to educate him, and show him that there is plenty to life, politics and society that he doesn't know yet? Why not try to correct his ill-founded notions instead of throwing him out and giving him a grudge against society and perhaps causing him to give up his desire for any higher learning? Why not try to train Mr. Carliner into a useful citizen, sane and balanced in all his views, as any educated man ought to be Or am I wrong in assuming that these things are among the purposes of a college?

As it is, G. W. U. has simply lost a chance to do some honest educational work. The university made no attempt to show Mr. Carliner where he was wrong; it merely said dogmatically that he was wrong and that as soon as he learned better he could come around and learn to conjugate French verbs.

Were I in a position to do so, I would apologize to Mr. Carliner on behalf of G. W. U. He will never get such an apology otherwise. As it is, Mr. Carliner may want to extend his own sympathy to me, for I am still under the thumb of G. W. U. The public ought to extend its regrets to Mr. Carliner for this outrage.

Prodigal Daughter.

Post Office, Friday.

SOMEWHERE in these United States today is an American, rich, aged between 44 and 54, whose daughter has just been found guilty, at Brussels, of murder.

And her father is ignorant of her plight . . .

* * *

We'll begin, however, with the man in the daughter's case:

Pierre was the utterly spoiled son of parents wealthy and doting. His mother died during his early boyhood; he was brought up—if you may call it that—by grandparents more wealthy and more doting still. They let him do precisely as he pleased—until what he pleased not only couldn't please anyone except himself and his sycophants, but thoroughly frightened his natural guardians. Then they ended altogether his absurdly large allowance.

* * *

In his early twenties—that is to say, about 1932—he took up with Malou, a girl somewhat under his own age, one of the maddest and most popular firefliers of those "American Bars" and "Dancings," in Paris and Brussels, where Pierre passed the nights that were his days: a pale and piquant little person, whose trade-mark was the black beret which she wore so rakishly as to hide all the upper half of her right cheek. Thus worn it gave, among other advantages, the advantage of throwing into cameo-relief the ivory-white of her perfect profile.

* * *

Expensive places, though, those Elysian fields of this pair's fancy. The couple needed lots of ready money. Malou earned a bit—Pierre permitted that—yet not enough: not nearly. He robbed his grandparents—several times; bijouterie, which he now knew how to sell to fences. Nevertheless, there was a limit to the family jewels, and he soon reached it . . .

* * *

He was a handsome gigolo. He began to steal from such mature ladies as admired him too much. The last was a Mme. Herel! . . .

* * *

The prosecution contended that Malou chose the victim and bought the chloroform. Mme. Herel had been anaesthetized and drowned in a hip-bath . . .

* * *

Not much trouble to trace Pierre, who, upon arrest, blamed Malou for his ruin and as instigator of the crime. The procureur du roi—the district attorney—inveighed against her as a beautiful seductress. To more than that effect Pierre's attorney inveighed against her.

Malou wouldn't open her lovely lips in retaliation. But her own lawyer, Mtre. Torres, told another story.

* * *

In 1911 an American "bel et riche," who was loitering over there, engaged himself to a working girl, went home to arrange his affairs—never returned. That girl, too proud to appeal to him, bore Malou and, "se souvenant de l'egoisme des hommes"—having sadly learned how selfish we men may be—reared her with rigor and fear: a modest child and devout.

At 15 she was betrothed to the aviator Jean Decraene. He had her and her mother as passengers in his automobile when it was smashed—the mother killed and the daughter taken to hospital with injuries which he feared might lessen her delicate beauty.

So he, too, rode away.

* * *

Mtre. Torres said the accident and subsequent desertion changed Malou's character. But a beautiful seductress driving a weak boy to murder? Why Pierre did the whole thing on his own initiative and without her knowledge! Look you: this Malou was only a broken-spirited, blemished creature, clinging to any straw that she could seize.

* * *

Whereupon, to prove it, that lawyer of hers ripped from Malou's beautiful head her black beret: that automobile accident had, indeed, fulfilled Decraene's fears. Her right eye was gone, the upper half of her right cheek one frightful scar.

Whereupon, also, Malou, with an angry cry, recovered and replaced the kindly beret.

She preferred condemnation to such exposure. . . .

* * *

Proud Malou won't tell Mtre. Torres her father's name. Her childhood neighbors have forgotten it, though they are unanimous as to that American's reality. The father himself doesn't know of his daughter's existence; for, you remember, the mother, also proud, never tried to trace him—nor have our enterprising American newspapers published the story of the trial.

* * *

So where is a well-to-do citizen of these United States, who loafed through Paris, Brussels and Luxembourg in 1910 and '11 and loved a little—Malou's mother? He knows her name, anyhow.

It was Louise Gerin.

* * *

"If this should come to the attention of——"

* * *

Not that it could help a great deal. For, though Pierre got 24 years, Malou got 15.

Fair Enough

Toronto Baby Derby.

New York, Aug. 29.

THE propagation contest in Toronto, in which a number of prolific couples are competing for a $500,000 prize to be awarded next year, never has received as much publicity as it deserves. In this remarkable struggle the woman who produces the greatest number of progeny within a ten-year period will receive the entire purse bequeathed in 1926 by Charles Vance Millar. Aside from the problem of delicacy, which tends to prevent the free handling of the topic in the press, the event suffers from spells of inactivity when there is no scoring going on. The propagation derby disappears from view for long periods, then pops into the news for a day when one of the leading contestants has another child.

At the moment the subject is revived again by the fact that Mrs. John Nagle, an earnest contender, has just had her ninth since the starting date set by the terms of the bequest in the late Mr. Millar's will. This puts her in a tie for second place with Mrs. Grace Bagnato, but Mrs. Bagnato had her ninth last December, and time is in her favor. Moreover, Mrs. Bagnato is said to be disposed to challenge the score of the leader, Mrs. Matthew Kenny, who has had 11, on the ground that only 3 of Mrs. Kenny's children have lived.

Another lady, Mrs. Stephano Darrigo, with seven babies registered in the score, might rush up from behind like the Boston Braves of 1914 and win the $500,000 with quintuplets. Such a belated rally is not to be expected, of course, but anything is possible in Canada, and a lady who has had seven in less than nine years must always be considered a dangerous contender.

• • • •

UNFORTUNATELY, Mr. Millar seems to have overlooked many difficult technicalities which can arise in a contest of this kind. The donors of the America's Cup were more careful, laying down requirements so precise that in 1920, when the yachtsmen were measuring the boats in New York, they had to send for scientists from Massachusetts Tech to calculate the thickness of the paint on the hulls and work it into the problem. The World Series regulations are a marvel of foresight, providing for almost every contingency which might arise on a baseball field, but have been found defective, nevertheless, in a couple of instnces. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that Mr. Millar, having no personal experience, failed to anticipate several difficult points.

For one thing he neglected to stipulate how long a baby must live in this world, if at all, in order to be considered eligible. This may have seemed unimportant, or may not even have occurred to him, but already one lady is disputing another contestant's score on the ground that certain of her children did not survive the doubtful privilege of being born into a world of war, want and temptation as markers in a sporting event. In the end it may be necessary to go to the courts for a ruling and for the courts to go to the philosophers and the clergy for guidance. Such a dispute would mar the nobility of the contest, but $500,000 is no trifling prize, and a lady who has gone through the extreme personal inconvenience of having a child naturally will demand that each one be scored, however brief its life and whatever its character.

• • • •

MR. MILLAR apparently made no provision, either, as to the quality of the children. In a prolonged race against time, with quantity the sole consideration, there might be a few children among so many who are not quite bright or not very strong. This does not follow, to be sure, but there are those who do believe that the risk of defects, mental and physical, must be greater in quantity production, with speed a factor, than under more casual conditions.

The future of the children, except the children of the winner, is left to themselves and their parents so far as the terms of the bequest are concerned, unless I am misled by my occasional fragmentary reading of the game in Toronto. There is neither place nor show money, and while the winning family will be well provided for, some of the losers may live to regret that their parents ever entered the competition.

It would be interesting to know more about Mr. Millar. He is described as a sportsman, but what was his object in this case? Did he believe he was doing a good deed or was he a mischievous man with a sour sense of humor who wished to inflict life and its responsibilities on a lot of innocents and their children who otherwise might not have had to be born at all?

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

Two Red Candles.

From two red candles slowly drip
The waxy tears of time;
These very moments, well I know,
Will soon be just langsyne.

From two red candles falls a light;
Within the soft, warm glow
My eyes behold, in secret joy,
What long I did not know.

So quietly the rays have pierced
The veil that long concealed.
And now, so clear, so real I see
The latent YOU revealed.

And deep is silence, yet how rich
Its tone so tender, bland.
How friendly are the words it speaks,
"And now—you understand."

Where two red candles once had stood,
A mass of wax has formed;
The tears of time have passed away—
A brighter light has dawned.

America will not ship implements of war to any warring country until next February, by which time somebody may be able to determine just what constitutes an implement of war and whether under modern conditions it includes cameras, flashlights and microphones.

President Roosevelt's statement that the modern youth is not interested primarily in money gets an awful kick in the pants the minute you suggest to any boy that he go to work just for the experience and training.

An autoist who for two years threw away police summonses for violating motor ordinances and never bothered to come to court was finally arrested recently and fined $120. On that basis it looks like a good proposition. But can we save anything on a three-year-basis?

The Enemy Of Fascism

Mussolini's Talk Of "Effete" Britain And Of "Sharing" Route To India Brings English To Realization That If Abyssinia Is Not Ceded Italy Will Allow Austro-German Combine.

By Edward Acheson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London (By Mail).

BRITISH concern over the failure of the three-power discussions of the Italo-Abyssinian imbroglio can not be exaggerated. In toto, it goes far deeper than the causes for alarm voiced by any one division of public opinion. For, now, to the general fear for League prestige and for the whole system of collective security, is added an uneasiness over the lengths to which Mussolini is prepared to go along the road his anti-British rhetoric has illuminated.

The basic question in London is whether the Duce's current bombast results from auto-intoxication or represents the culmination of a plan. And the alternatives are vastly important.

From the Wal-Wal border incident Mussolini's range and volume has steadily amplified to such a degree that he now quite casually speaks of the British Empire as the real enemy of Fascism.

Obviously, for internal consumption, it is a far more glorious thing to challenge Great Britain's route to the east than to push over a poorly armed, disorganized black people. Two months ago, the African land grabbing scheme was in dire need of glamour; that has now been supplied.

Furthermore, the Italian resentment against England has served to unify Italian opinion as it has not been unified since the march on Rome. There can be no doubt that the resentment is real. It has been made real by ingenious journalism; but it is none the less absurd.

• • • •

THAT England has interests in Africa which must be protected, the Italian is ready to admit. What he resents so vociferously is the manner in which England has sought to protect those interests by putting the League machinery into motion against Italy and in favor, apparently, of Abyssinia. England did not do this in the case of Japan. Why then single out Italy for special persecution?

What the Italian does not realize, and what the government takes very good care he won't realize, is the fact that Mussolini himself is to blame for the manner of British interference. The way and the means to peaceful settlement of all Italian economic aspirations and political fears in Africa were already prepared in the 1906 Tripartite Treaty. From the offers which M. Laval and Mr. Eden recently made in Paris there can be no doubt that had Mussolini invoked the treaty at some earlier date almost any concession would have been forthcoming.

And, in the event that full satisfaction could not be achieved in that way—in the event that France and Britain remained, in Italian eyes, unreasonable—then the present campaign of denunciation and vilification might conceivably have had some logical excuse.

But the treaty was not invoked. Deliberately, Mussolini chose the course which left him no retreat. Deliberately and by stages he has raised the stakes to world proportions.

• • • •

UNTIL the failure of the three-power conversations in Paris, England was quite convinced that the anti-British campaign in Rome was enlistment propaganda. Today that conviction is by no means unshakable.

The gentle, paternal cynicism of Baron Aloisi has pointed the case. Not only in effect, but actually, he has stated that Italy will leave the League if her African plans are opposed. "Italy does not want to quit the League; only, of course, if we are kicked out we shall be obliged to go. It depends on the march of events."

And again, horse-trading has rarely reached such blatancy as in the Baron's remark that "if Italy is expected to play as big a role in the councils of Europe as France and Britain an end must be put to the threat to her security at her own back door." Not even the gloss of a "white man's burden" to that: a perfectly forthright statement that if Abyssinia is not ceded, Italy will let Germany have Austria. And the fillip at the end was added by the fact that a question as to what constituted the Abyssinian "threat" wasn't even answered. It was smiled at.

That, then, constitutes one problem—Italy's perfectly open threat to the whole post-war system. One section of British opinion is concerned on that score, and deeply concerned. But another, embracing the formidable strength of the isolationist press is quite ready to see the post-war system challenged, tried and defeated.

• • • •

APPARENTLY Mussolini counted on this division of opinion to give a certain indirection to British policy. His opinion has proved correct. He has talked boldly of England's weakened position since the war, of her pacifism, of her reputation alone supporting her right to Mediterranean supremacy. He claims the British have become effete, Italy mighty. He talks of "sharing" the route to India. His demand for "total subjugation and control of Abyssinia," in direct violation of the 1906 Treaty he cites in justification, now envisages the control of Lake Tsana, of the Sudan, of Egypt. He talks vaguely of Malta and Arabia.

Is this auto-intoxication or plan? England has convened her cabinet in emergency session. Parliament is standing by. Mussolini has been misinformed about the effete qualities of England. Opinion is divided on the question of defending a League member from the aggression of another League member. But British opinion has no important dissenting minority on the question of defending the empire. On matters of principle England ponders and wavers: in problems which affect her interest, although a late starter, she has, to date, finished well out in front.

The decision which the government must reach before September 4 is two-fold: What is Britain's stand on the value of Geneva and collective security. Second, is there a threat to the British Empire either immediate or deferred in the Italian attitude; and, if so, what action should be taken.

To the first there are a number of possible answers. To the second only one. And Mussolini may very well find that he has, ingenuously, bluffed himself right off the end of his limb.

So You've Done The Gaspe!

METIS SUR MER, province of Quebec—the Gaspe, like the Danube, Niagara Falls, and lessons, is something to "do." Montrealers may possibly stay summers there, but I should be more than little surprised if people from the States, whose cars outnumber the Quebec licenses ten to one on the road, ever repeat the grand tour. In brief, it's a bit too strenuous.

What you have, on this pouting lower lip of the St. Lawrence, is a motor highway which I shall presume is like nothing else on the globe. The central and sporting section, from Cap des Rosiers at the extreme eastern tip to St. Ann des Monts on the north coast, is only 124 miles. But even your case-hardened motorist from Illinois or Ohio, who schedules and apparently achieves his daily run at a rate of 45 miles to the hour and on the hour, is in for a chastening.

The Perron highway, as the belt line is called, runs some 20 or 30 times over shoulders of the Shickshock Mountains bending straight down into the sea—huge, appallingly massive abutments upon which our ribbon of road climbs up 800, 1,000, 1,200 feet in a couple of miles and then, taking a hitch in its belt, descends to the very beach itself. One must admire that road, and the courage and ingenuity which built it. A smooth gravel, giving room to pass anyone but an Ontario driver, it loops and soars and plunges with perfect suavity. I wish I could say as much for the motorist. But he clings to his wheel and gear-shift lever in a trance of amazement over the fact that his car is doing what it was never called upon to do before.

• • • •

TAKE the covered bridges. One's normal acquaintance with them leads one to think them mild and bucolic creations, fit for hay wagons, a drove of cattle, and Sarah Orne Jewett. Yet on the Gaspe they perch high in the mountains, looking much like overalls would in darkest Africa. Below them a wooded gorge splits its way all but sheer to the sea; above them cliffs and escarpments catch hold of the clouds; on the far side of their brief level one invariably finds a sudden lift in the road which calls not for a little more gas in high, not for second gear, but for an ascent in low gear which is plain, unabashed and dogged. After the first two or three you learn to do your shifting in the middle of the bridge, give her the gun and hang on tight.

At the top even a passenger prefers not to look down over the side. At one summit I stole a hurried glance from the road to see astonishingly far below me a liner out-bound for Europe. At least I inferred that—what I saw, puny and alone on that great wide expanse of cobalt blue, looked like a model carved from a match stick.

And then the descent. There used to be a roller-coaster at Revere Beach near Boston, which was reputed to be going 80 miles an hour at the bottom of the first chute. Gentlemen, that sensation had nothing in it in comparison with dropping down upon a little Gaspe fishing village with the car pushing the engine in low gear at the roaring rate of 151, and seemingly ready to take the gears entirely out of her at any minute!

• • • •

ON the large scale, the Gaspe is such mountain and sea-scape as is seldom to be viewed; on the small it is plain, poor little village, cod fish drying in the sun, and very bad French. Close at hand the houses are distinctly unremarkable, though some of the pinks and yellows titillate the eye. But take the villages from a mountain top, and I particularly commend the eastern view of Petite Vallee, and you have gems which look and compose like the finest water-color paintings. Then you arrive and try out your French.

Once, some years ago in the Riviere du Loup region, a French lady and I got so mixed up over the quarts and pints—there is some peculiar confusion of sound which I forget—that she brought me two quarts of cream for my breakfast. And today, lunching at Mont Louis, the proprietress said there was "d'la truite" to be had. Nothing like some mountain trout, I thought, but when it came in it was blushing in a fashion rather odd for trout. Very like salmon, in fact. And so it was. "La truite, le saumon, ca sont les meme choses," she said huffily.

But on the whole the natives are extraordinarily kind. They will even slow down their French for you, which is an achievement in friendliness. And I shall never forget breakfast out near L'Anse au Griffon, at a little house which advertised "meals at every hours," where the proprietress laid down first a sour raspberry tart, then corn bread, then a cup of chicory coffee, and finally, in a superb burst of hospitality out of the very goodness of her heart, a bottle of ginger ale and a bottle of cream soda. Of course, there was no declining, and now I can even recommend it for those who never dared to think of pop for breakfast.

Stevenson and Shaw

By

William Lyon Phelps

STEVENSON died young and Shaw is nearly 80; it seems hard to realize that the Scot was only six years older than the Irishman. It is not always remembered, however, how quick Stevenson was in discerning genius. He wrote to Barrie, "I am a capable artist; but it begins to look to me as if you were a man of genius."

• • •

In the winter of 1887-1888, when Stevenson was at Saranac Lake, he received from England, from his friend William Archer, a copy of the new novel, "Cashel Byron's Profession," written by Shaw, who was then about 30 years old. Stevenson wrote:

"I have read your friend's book with singular relish. If he has written any other, I beg you will let me see it; and if he has not, I beg him to lose no time in supplying the deficiency. It is full of promise, but I should like to know his age . . . there are passages . . . that show genuine and remarkable narrative talent . . . a talent that few will have the wit to understand, a talent of strength, spirit, capacity, sufficient vision and sufficient self-sacrifice, which last is the chief point in a narrator . . . It is all mad, mad and deliriously delightful . . . and then he daubs in little bits of socialism . . . he soars away on the wings of the romantic griffon . . . and I believe in his heart he thinks he is laboring in a quarry of solid granite realism.

"If Mr. Shaw is below five-and-twenty, let him go his path; if he is thirty, he had best be told that he is a romantic, and pursue romance with his eyes open . . . It is horrid fun. All I ask is more of it. Thank you for the pleasure you gave us, and tell me more of the inimitable author."

(I say, Archer, my God, what women!)

• • •

On The Air Today

Every mail brings new announcements of fall and winter shows—and additional details of many already announced. The Atwater Kent concert series will be inaugurated September 19, marking the tenth year on the air. Lawrence Tibbett will appear on one of the largest networks ever engaged for an individual soloist. Following an extensive road tour he will return to the Metropolitan Opera House for his eleventh season.

On September 12, "Haw and Esther" begin a weekly series with Teddy Bergman, Jack Arthur, Audrey Marsh, Victor Arden's orchestra and the Rhythm Girls. It's the backstage in the theater theme. October 2, Burns and Allen begin a new series in the interests of tomato soup.

* * * *

September 29, Phil Baker, who went on the stage "so I could sleep later in the morning," begins a fall series with the assistance of his stooges and an orchestra as yet unnamed. The "Og" series for children reappears September 30.

Special exchange programs with foreign countries will be inaugurated on a new basis September 7 with the observance of Brazil's Independence Day.

There was a time when the radio listener and the radio industry alike cried for news broadcasts—and yet more news. In the last two or three years that apparently has been corrected. From early morning until late night one can hardly twist a dial from station to station this side of Chicago without catching a detail of the latest kidnaping or catastrophe. Latest in this line is a schedule of four five-minute broadcasts a day, to be inaugurated late in September, at WJSV, for the Wilkins Co.

The Beauty Box Theater presents a romance of early California tonight at 8 on WMAL—Victor Herbert's "Natoma." Francia White, herself a Californian, sings the title role supported by John Barclay and Jan Peerce. "Natoma" was first presented in 1911 at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York . . . "The Voice of Cornlikker," a new type hillbilly show, opens on WOL tonight at 9:30, coming from New York on the Intercity net. It is hinted it will be a satire on the "Voice of Experience."

N. B. C. will cover the national air races at Cleveland the next few days, beginning with a half-hour this afternoon at 3. Ruth Chatterton, who leads a delegation from Hollywood, is expected to be interviewed, with the winner of the Bendix Trophy race, the world's greatest long distance speed flight, who will be known just before the broadcast begins.

* * * *

Marion Davies is guest tonight in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 8, appearing with Dick Powell and Pat O'Brien in a preview of their new picture, "Page Miss Glory." In the cast for the radio version will be Patsy Kelly and Frank McHugh, two of moviedom's better comics. . . . John R. Tunis, tennis authority, will give a resume of the day's play of the national singles tennis championship matches direct from Forest Hills today and tomorrow for N. B. C. networks.

Dogs are forbidden in Radio City, but Tuesday afternoon a German shepherd was shown every courtesy. Isa, the dog, was with Ethel Stevens, of New Haven, who is blind. I happened to be watching a rehearsal of Ben Bernie and "all the lads" when Isa appeared in the studio. Bernie was out of the front row of seats, from which point he was directing the rehearsal, in a flash and the rehearsal went to pot for the time being while the "old maestro" and Isa talked things over. Bernie wisecracks a lot on his programs about horses (the kind that run the wrong way) but he certainly showed a definite fondness for dogs that afternoon. J. H. H.

Huge Bull 'Arrested' After Trespassing

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 29.—A 1,500-pound white bull was theoretically under arrest today as a "trespasser." Deputy Sheriffs L. Crawford Huber and L. H. Huber seized the 6-year-old bull from Frank Pike, of Montgomery Township, yesterday under a writ of replevin. The writ was issued on petition of Allen Elliott, Pike's neighbor. Pike said the animal crossed a fence and caused damage to his property. He penned up the bull in his barn. Pending disposition of the writ, the bull was returned to the Elliott barn.

Iowa Teachers Will Be Given Increased Pay

Raises of 5 to 10% Due in Most Schools Next Term.

By the United Press.

Des Moines, Iowa.—School teachers, whose salaries took a tailspin during the economic depression, are due to receive larger pay checks during the approaching school term, R. C. Williams, director of research for the Iowa department of public instruction, said today.

He based his conclusions on the salary situation for teachers in Iowa schools, which, he asserts, will be raised in nearly all quarters during the next term.

Increases will range from 5 to 10 per cent, Williams pointed out, with Muscatine among the cities that have scheduled a 10 per cent raise. Teachers in Iowa Falls are due for a 7½ per cent boost in pay. The average raise will be about 6 per cent, he said.

A State-wide checkup will be impossible until the State department of education begins to gather data for its annual directory after schools resume sessions in September.

The 1934-35 yearbook of the department shows that 15,141 teachers were employed in Iowa schools during those terms. Of this number 6,893 taught in elementary grades, 2,715 were teachers in high schools and 1,384 were men teachers in high schools. The greatest number of teachers were employed during 1934-35 in consolidated school districts, where towns of less than 500 persons are situated.

Nell Gwyn's Old Home Modernized at Chelsea

London (AP).—The old Chelsea home of Nell Gwyn, mistress of Charles II, has been skillfully modernized without losing any of its Old World dignity. It has been named Pineapple Priory by Mrs. Jack Coats, who resides there now.

Cream-colored walls and enameled bannisters have transformed what was once a rather gloomy entrance hall. "Birds-egg" blue painted walls harmonize with bright green doors and windows frames in one of the bedrooms.

All the windows are hung with old-gold soft silk net to avoid an uneven appearance outside. Inner curtains of draped taffeta and furniture belonging to a less prosaic age help to preserve the seventeenth century atmosphere.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

3 Deny Guilt In Shortage At Md. Bank

Fourth Defendant Gets Hearing on Charge of Embezzlement.

President of National Central Testifies on 'Blackmail' Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—Three of the four men charged as co-conspirators in connection with the alleged embezzlement of $226,000 from the National Central Bank here today entered pleas of not guilty and waived preliminary hearings before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen.

The fourth defendant, Fenby T. Brown, head of a Havre de Grace distillery, also pleaded not guilty but asked for a hearing. After several hours of testimony, the hearing was continued until tomorrow morning.

The three held for grand jury action after waiving hearings were: Harry H. Hahn, former vice president and cashier of the bank.

Earl L. Montgomery, former paying teller at the bank.

James B. McKeldin, former collection clerk at the bank.

Bank President Testifies.

William E. Katenkamp, president of the bank, was the first witness called as Brown's hearing began. He testified that the first intimation he and other officials received that there was a shortage came in the form of a rumor early in July.

He stated that he conferred with a Federal examiner who had just completed a periodical audit and was assured that everything was all right.

On July 31, he said, a statement carried as a cash account by Hahn in the name of the Harford Pure Rye Distillery, amounting to $127,577, was brought to his attention. The statement was being carried on the settlement book of the cashier.

Katenkamp said he talked with Hahn who said the check was being held at his direction, but that it "would be taken care of in a short while."

"Blackmail" Alleged.

The bank president said he talked with Hahn again on August 3 and said Hahn admitted there was a shortage of approximately $226,000 and that with the exception of approximately $300, the entire amount had gone to the use of the distillery.

Hahn said "I asked for an explanation and all Mr. Hahn would say was 'It was a matter of blackmail that the overdrafts were held.'"

The witness said Hahn gave no further explanation of the "blackmail."

John H. Johnson, secretary and treasurer and a director of the distillery company, was called as a witness by the Government but declined to testify, saying, "I decline to gave any statement of testimony which may incriminate me."

Maryland in Tropics 40 Million Years Ago

Two members of the expedition of the Natural History Society of Maryland are shown inspecting the cliffs over the Potomac River south of Washington for further traces of prehistoric animal remains.

Natural History Society Uncovers Remains of Huge Crocodile in Cliffs of the Potomac; Other Significant Finds Are Made.

By the Associated Press.

Riverside, Md., Aug. 29.—Geological records indicating that Maryland's climate was tropical in nature during the eocene period—some 40,000,000 years ago—have been uncovered near here by an expedition of the Natural History Society of Maryland.

Chief among the finds of the scientists, all Baltimore teachers, was the snout of a giant crocodile. That find alone, they feel, is definite evidence that Maryland, once had a tropical climate.

The snout is approximately 30 inches long, giving evidence as to the size of the giant animal. Imbedded in it are a number of cone-shaped teeth two or three inches long.

Scaffold Built.

The finds were made in the cliffs of the Potomac River near Aquia Creek. The crocodile remains were located 12 feet above the beach and the scientists had to turn carpenters and erect a scaffold to complete their excavations.

Other finds of a valuable scientific nature during the excavations, which began August 18 and will continue through this week, include several oyster shells nine inches long and round in shape, a number of shark teeth, parts of the backbone of lare sharks and a number of crushing, pavement teeth of the giant eagle ray. The ray is commonly known as a "skate."

Exhibit Planned.

Most of the society's work in the past has been done in the miocene period, which was approximately 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 years ago. The present expedition had as its purpose the discovery of remains of forms of life of the eocene period.

The specimens found on this trip have been shipped to Baltimore and will be placed on exhibition in the society's hall there. The society already has a valuable collection of relics of the miocene period.

Members of the party included Elra M. Palmer, John B. Calder, B. A. Calder, Earl H. Palmer, Robert Wheeler and William E. Lehr.

Bigger Peach Crop Seen for Franklin

25 Per Cent Greater Yield Predicted by Experts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 29.—A peach crop 25 per cent greater than that of last year was predicted for Franklin County today by County Agent J. H. Knode after an orchard inspection tour with J. O. Pepper, State College entomologist.

Last year county orchardists harvested 108,860 bushels, with a yield of $176,350. Because of the large size of the fruit this year the crop may reach 150,000 bushels, the county agent said.

Pepper said the fruit was unusually free from insect sting and brown rot. Early varieties such as South Haven and Golden Jubilee are about harvested and growers are now turning their attention to Belle of Georgia and Elberta, the latter the major commercial variety of the county.

Power Bond Vote Date Due Shortly

Danville Election Expected Around Oct. 1.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 29.—Judge Henry C. Leigh probably will act before the end of the week in setting a date for the referendum on the issuance of $1,513,000 PWA bonds for power development purposes to which will be added $1,237,909 in the form of a grant. The belief is that the court will set the election date around October 1, by which time many Danville voters now on the Southern tobacco markets will be home.

The campaign has been marked by a severe attack by E. W. Brown and Edmund Meade, who are opposed to the Pinnacles project, on the city council majority for its alleged failure to produce records of expense in obtaining action on the Danville application.

Guardsmen Drill In Air 'Strafing'

Whole 91st Brigade Takes Part in Operation.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., Aug. 29.—With a new sense of what airplane "strafing" means, Virginia National Guardsmen in camp here, went into a defense and attack problem today. The large-scale operation, in which the whole Ninety-first Brigade took part, is one of the last items on their training schedule.

Yesterday the State troops witnessed a demonstration of fighting tactics staged by 23 planes from Langley Field. Flying low over the heads of assembled guardsmen and visitors, the Army fliers poured machine-gun fire into an ocean area designated as "occupied by enemy troops."

The camp closes this week-end.

At Strasburg, troops of the 111th Field Artillery Regiment and their headquarters battery began a road problem which will carry men and guns through the roads of the historic Shenandoah Valley. Drawing toward the close of their two-week camp the artillerymen turned to an actual battle practice formation.

Record Enrollment Seen For Washington-Lee

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Aug. 29.—Indications are that Washington and Lee will have the largest student body in its history this year, it was said today at the office of Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of the university.

Registration of new men today was 60 ahead of the like date last year, and this with a heavy spring registration of former students is expected to put total enrollment during the year well ahead of the peak of 932 reached in 1930-1931.

325 Middies Departing For Leaves

21 Others Go Home as Virginia Modifies Paralysis Ban.

Entire Regiment to Be Back at School on September 27.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 29.—Evacuation of the Naval Academy was completed today as 325 second class midshipmen following in the wake of upper classmen, started on leave until September 28.

Added impetus to the rush home came when it was announced that Secretary of the Navy Swanson had approved a request by academy authorities to lift an infantile paralysis quarantine on all but 16 counties of Virginia. This affected approximately 21 midshipmen who departed for home.

The Virginia ban was lifted after Capt. F. A. Todd, commandant of midshipmen, had talked to public health officials in Virginia and authorities of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and of the Navy Department and the United States Public Health Service.

Paralysis Decreases.

Information from Virginia health authorities indicated a rapid decrease in the disease in the past two weeks. The Virginia counties quarantined are Alleghany, Amelia, Albemarle, Brunswick, Campbell, Dinwiddie, Louisa, Henrico, Nottaway, Greene, Nelson, Cumberland, Roanoke, Buckingham, and Fluvanna.

The Army-Navy Club in Washington was also freed from the effects of the quarantine. A similar ban on North Carolina was lifted last Tuesday.

Attired in blue service suits, the midshipmen streamed from Annapolis in private automobiles, buses and by railroad. Last Saturday second classmen finished summer aviation and engineering courses.

Those leaving via the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad took buses to Winchester and then entrained for Baltimore due to the reinforcement of the Severn River Railroad Bridge. The lone remnant of the 12,000-mile European cruise was the U. S. S. Wyoming anchored off the academy. It leaves September 7 for New York with Navy reservists aboard. The Arkansas departed last Tuesday.

The homeward trek to Annapolis begins September 5, when varsity football men return. September 27 will bring the entire regiment back to academic work.

Truck Drive In Maryland At Its Peak

Motor Vehicle Official Notes 35 Arrests and $100 Fines.

Drivers Warned to Have Permits Showing Insurance Carried.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—Maryland's drive on commercial trucks which operate in the State without the necessary liability and property damage insurance is at its height, Walter R. Rudy, commissioner of motor vehicles, said today.

He asserted that in one week recently 35 drivers were arrested for this offense, and each fined $100. Most of these trucks were from Ohio, although others were from Southern States.

Drivers who carry loads for hire must have $10,000 liability and $1,000 property damage insurance, and must have a Maryland permit showing this insurance to be in force. Rudy said truck owners who take out insurance in other States should notify the insurance company they expect to operate in Maryland. The company will then notify the commissioner, who will send the owner a permit which must be kept in the cab of the truck.

The law does not apply to owners who carry their own produce, such as farmers, unless they carry the produce of a neighbor for hire. In this case they must have insurance, also. Even if the truck makes only occasional trips into the State, it must carry the insurance, and drivers must know where the insurance permit is, Rudy said.

Trucks of violators of the law will be impounded and held until insurance is procured, even though they carry perishable products, Rudy declared. The drivers will be held in jail until the fine is paid.

Martinsburg Acts To Buy Park Site

Option on Three Possible Locations Authorized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.—City council in session last night authorized Judge D. H. Rodgers, chairman of the public parks committee of the city planning board, to obtain an option on three possible sites for city parks. They would be built through $25,000 promised the city by the Works Progress Administration, but available only if the city is in possession of the park property by September 12.

The property most favored by the council is the old Rosemont Park site in the western part of the city and containing some 34 acres. This site also includes the property where the old Blue Ridge League ball park was located. The price was reported as $16,000. The other sites proposed contain 20 and 130 acres, respectively.

The only obstacle in the path of the purchase is a shortage of funds, but it is thought this could be taken care of by arranging for easy terms until the appropriation can be provided for in the budget of next year.

County Treasurer Swells Funds With Own Cash

Richmond, Aug. 29 (AP).—The State auditor today reported that a survey of Frederick County finances for the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1934, showed county affairs were in excellent condition.

The county treasurer had on hand large sums in excess of the amounts due from him. These surpluses represented personal funds which he had left in the county treasury.

Own Men Capture General in 'Battle'

Blue Army Is Declared Winner of Action Along Creek.

By Phil Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Reckord, Mount Gretna, Pa., Aug. 29.—The "Blue" Army, composed of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth National Guard divisions, officially won the Battle of Swatara Creek, it was revealed at a critique today in Annville (Pa.) High School.

"Capture" of Brig. Ken. Washington Bowie, jr., commanding the Fifty-eighth Brigade of the Twenty-ninth Division, by his own men, in the course of the battle, was revealed today.

The general was touring the front lines of his brigades in the darkness when he approached an outpost, Private Petro Angelini, Company L, Fifth Infantry, which is part of the Fifty-eighth Brigade.

Corporal Frees General.

Seeing the ghostly figure of the general looming in the mist, Angelini asked: "Who are you?"

The general answered him and then asked the same question.

"It makes no difference who I am. You stay here. I see my boss about you." Angelini replied. The "boss," Corpl. W. C. Tabor, released the "prisoner."

The critique at Annville was conducted by Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Conklin, chief of staff of the Third Corps, in the absence of Maj. Gen. Robert E. Callin, who has returned to Baltimore because of illness.

Fought in Darkness.

A conference of umpires decided that the "Blue" Army had defeated the "Red" Army, represented by a skeletonized Eighth Regular Army Division, in the battle fought in the darkness before yesterday's dawn.

Commenting on the battle, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division which conducted the main offensive, said:

"Carefully thought-out plans were carried out well, and the whole operation was of great value to all concerned in providing co-operation of different arms of the services necessary in actual war.

Operations in Dark.

"The troop movements conducted in darkness and such operations as building of bridges without a light of any kind and without a hitch, were especially successful.

"It is to be hoped that military exercises such as these may be held frequently."

Trophies and medals won in camp athletic contests were presented today at a parade of the Fifty-eighth Brigade and the 104th Medical Regiment.

Will See Attack.

As the final act of the parade, the successful competitors stood beside Gen. Reckord and took in the review of the troops, led by Brig. Gen. Bowie, jr., which included the First Infantry, led by Col. D. John Markey, and the Fifth, commanded by Col. Frank A. Hancock, and the Medical Regiment, headed by Col. Frederick H. Vinup.

Officers and sergeants of the Twenty-ninth Division will be taken in trucks to Indiantown Gap tomorrow to witness a demonstration of an attack by a full war-strength battalion to be staged by the Thirty-fourth Infantry, Regular Army, from Camp Meade.

Ruritan Clubs Hold Meeting at Armory

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 29.—Between 250 and 300 members of the Ruritan Clubs of Southside Virginia attended a meeting last night at Grays' Armory in this city. In addition to the Ruritans there were present members of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs of this city.

The meeting was the first of its kind ever held in Petersburg, and members attended from Dinwiddie, McKenney, Jarratt, Wakefield, Surry and Matthews. The organization is similar to other civic clubs, but is confined to those who live in the rural sections.

Court Must Decide On Bootleg Status

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—The status of bootleg liquor—riding around from living room to kitchen of a citizen's domicile—in his hip pocket, is under legal scrutiny in corporation court here.

Abner M. Dyner, 52, the citizen, was fined $25 in police court last month on a charge of "transporting" less than a pint of illicit liquor. The "transportation," officers admitted, consisted in walking around in his own house with a pint flask in his pocket.

Under Virginia's old dry act, now invalidated, moving liquor within a house did not constitute transportation. Under the present A. B. C. act the point is left in doubt.

It will be argued before Judge William H. Sargeant on Saturday, September 7.

Raiders Seize Slot Machines In Hagerstown

County and City Police Open Drive on Order of State's Attorney.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 29.—County and city police made simultaneous raids shortly before last midnight upon a number of Hagerstown and county establishments, seizing 17 slot machines and citing proprietors to appear on charges of maintaining gaming tables.

The raids came on the heels of one Saturday upon an alleged bookmaking establishment here, in which 200 persons were found and the alleged operator, Harry D. Miggins, arrested.

State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram ordered the raids.

The officers learned that news of the drive to rid the city and county of gambling machines preceded them to a number of places visited, and in many of the places that had been previously "spotted" by officers no machines were found.

Three proprietors were fined $25 and costs today.

State Senator Ernest W. Miller was summoned today as a witness in the Miggins habeas corpus hearing at Cumberland Tuesday. It was indicated counsel for Miggins will argue the antibookmaking act of 1935 is invalid in that the procedure followed by the General Assembly did not conform with sections of the Constitution.

Washington County's Bank Balance $111,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 29.—Washington County has $111,000 in the bank, $70,000 more than it had last year at the same time, the board of county commissioners announced in complimenting the taxpayers in being so prompt in paying. Incidentally, the commissioners announced all debts had been liquidated.

Rail Roadbed Is Proposed For Highway

Line Suggested as Aid to Relieve Defense Road of Load.

Sen. Kennedy Sees Big Saving by Converting W., B. & A. for Use.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—A proposal that the abandoned roadbed of the defunct W. B. & A. Railway from Annapolis to Washington be made into a highway was added today to proposals for reliving the Defense highway of some of its traffic load.

The suggestion was made by State Senator Raymond E. Kennedy (Democrat), Fifth District, Baltimore. Senator Kennedy suggested the State roads commission investigate the possibilities of taking such action.

Five persons were killed in a bus-automobile crash on the Defense highway last week and considerable agitation has arisen since that the road should be widened and improved.

Kennedy pointed out use of the old railway roadbed would result in a considerable saving in construction of a new highway. Use of it, he said, would eliminate much excavation and other construction work.

"I understand that this is about a 63-foot right of way," Kennedy added. "Some of the property is fee-simple and would, of course, be owned by bondholders." Other sections of the right of way came to the railway by grant and would probably revert to the original landowners.

Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the highway commission, is reported to have said that the present highway is adequate for its traffic load. Other authorities are in favor of modernizing the present road.

Among those who today express a desire to see the route improved were president of the Maryland Senate, Lansdale G. Sasscer, and Delegate Ridgely P. Melvin. Sasscer says that he will do all in his power to get action on what he termed a "worthy project."

Those campaigning for the improvement of the highway point out that peak capacity some days reaches 15,000 cars. The State highway commission has estimated the maximum capacity of the road at 10,000 per day.

John S. White, member of the House of Delegates and chairman of the Defense highway committee of the Prince Georges County Federations of Citizens Associations, is now compiling figures to present to the States road commission. He says 14 fatal accidents have occurred on the road in the last 15 months.

Reader Asks Information on Night School Course; Another Wants Job.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Can you tell me whether courses of study in biology are offered in any of the adult night high school classes? If so, to whom should application for entry be addressed? Any information you may offer will be greatly appreciated.

STRANGER.

• • • •

DEAR STRANGER: Courses of study in biology will be offered adult night classes at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest, and possibly some other high schools (which I understand have not yet been designated) this winter. The course at Central High School begins the evening of September 24. For information regarding enrollment apply to E. J. Lockwood, of Wilson Teachers' College, Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest. His telephone number is National 6000, branch 308. He is director of Washington's night high school classes. M. H.

Should She Give Up Hope?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I know a widow, middle-aged, who must support herself. She is refined in manner, neat in appearance, and very willing to work. She has made application for employment every place she has heard of, but has had no success so far.

Just because this lady is middle-aged, must she give up all hope of finding work? It seems to me there should be some place for her, as companion, matron or hostess. I will be very grateful if you can give any advice which may help her in finding any such employment.

ANXIOUS.

• • • •

DEAR ANXIOUS: Certainly this woman shouldn't give up all hope of finding work just because she is middle-aged. The person who gives up because of fancied handicaps is, in my opinion, simply looking for an excuse to be a quitter. Finding a job is more or less a matter of combining faith with good works. If one keeps faith in one's self and faith in some higher power outside one's self, which works good to those who think, believe and expect good (who live and think and act affirmatively); and if one will work as systematically, as indefatigably, as cheerfully, and as intelligently in seeking a job as one expects to work in holding that job—it seems to me one just automatically succeeds in finding employment.

• • • •

Has this woman made application to the District of Columbia Employment Center, 480 Indiana avenue northwest, telephone National 3303? Has it occurred to her there are other things she might do, if there is no demand for her services as companion, matron or hostess? Has she tried to find a place as domestic servant, or does she create a handicap for herself by feeling "above" such work? Has she made the rounds of the real estate rental agencies, seeking a place as apartment house manager?

• • • •

Some time since I was called upon to help just such another woman find employment through this column. I had half a dozen letters, several telephone calls, from prospective employers. These I passed on to the woman seeking work. From time to time I asked her hopefully if she had found a place. The last time I heard from her she still hadn't found, so she told me, "just what she was looking for." She probably never will. The person looking for a job nowadays is wise who takes the thing which comes to hand and makes it a stepping stone to something better. M. H.

Women Can Aid Cause of Peace By Dropping Defeatist Views And Think for Themselves

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, veteran feminist and peace leader, issues a call to women to keep up their courage. It is particularly fitting that she should do so at a time when women generally were assailed with depression and hopelessness over the chaotic state of world affairs.

• • • •

Aside from their natural feminine dread of war, women face any threatened setback to civilization with a special motherly concern. Civilization is largely their child. They were the ones who injected stability into primitive life and developed the arts in which human progress has been founded. Now terrified and overwhelmed at the war clouds shadowing the world, the average woman feels in the mood for throwing up her hands and exclaiming "What's the use?"

• • • •

Usually her attitude is one of retreat and it may take one of several forms. If she has no men folk of fighting age she may take the smug "me and mine are safe" or "I might as well live today" attitude. If she is likely to be personally concerned in any war, then she effects a national retreat, takes the attitude that America should forthwith build a wall around itself or bury its head in the sand. Or, these failing, she may retreat into a sorrowful head-shaking fatalism.

ALL OF these attitudes are shortsighted, cowardly and selfish. They are unworthy the leadership of Mrs. Catt, to whom, in her long career of battling against stupidity and injustice, the word "courage" has been synonymous with "fight."

• • • •

What then is woman's immediate peace duty? It is to stop shaking her head, to stop uttering dire prophecies, to stop mouthing the platitudes of news reel demagogues and village store philosophers. It is above all to stop being a defeatist. It is to study, read, investigate and work out for herself an independent set of opinions and a constructive program of thought and action. If she cannot do this individually, then let her join an organization that has such an obligation.

• • • •

Another of her immediate duties is to see that each and every group and organization with which she is connected lays aside its knitting, its bridge benefits and its bazaars and lends its brains and its energy to an intelligent understanding of the world crisis. It is to see that these organizations first think clearly, then act boldly and do not allow themselves to be stampeded into passing resolutions based on half-baked knowledge or on what some public alarmist or windjammer has said.

WOMEN'S organized groups—church societies, patriotic organizations, lodges, culture, civic and professional clubs—all face within the next six months a challenge to come out of their small concerns and grapple mentally with a world crisis. For within that period the Ethiopian situation and this country's relation to future world military events will take shape. If women expect to have any voice in this matter they should prepare themselves without delay to speak intelligently and forcefully. In a time of crisis women's organizations are expected to furnish the leadership of the nation and they have no alternative now but to prepare intelligently for the job.

• • • •

Women probably never will agree on any one program by which peace may be had. But it is enough that they put their shoulder to the wheel and tackle the problem, that they prepare to meet whatever crisis may arise with reason and knowledge rather than with blind emotion. Moreover, the heartfelt desire for peace is the first step toward its fulfillment. The Empress Menen of Ethiopia has voiced a call to the women of the world to pray for peace. Women religious leaders are making the same appeal. That is only another way of asking that women turn their minds, hearts and souls toward the problem.

• • • •

If another war were on, women would be rushing in a great fervor to enroll in Red Cross classes, to join up in motor corps. They would be getting into uniforms, parading and speaking. But it would be a case of locking the stable door after the horse was stolen. Now is the time for them to show their patriotism both to their country and to civilization by doing the less spectacular thing, by mobilizing their powers for peace.

Old-Fashioned Parlor Games Back in Favor

Parents Advised to Let Children Plan Programs for Parties.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

One of the interesting developments of the day is the re-emergence of the parlor game. What has produced this change in fashion is hard to say, but the fact remains that a group of youngsters thrown together for an evening is apt to play, with modern variations, the games which were popular with their grandparents 60 years ago.

At Mary's first grown-up party, which took place when she was 18, no liquor was served, as was so often done ten or even five years ago. There was a simple buffet supper at which, by special request, both father and mother were present.

After supper there was some dancing, and then someone suggested a game. Father and mother, who had been planning to slip away for a much-needed rest, found that they were expected to stay and that protests and excuses were useless. They were perforce dragged into the frolic, and enjoyed it quite as much as the youngsters did.

Of course, "Murder" was revived, but in a more mature and less housebreaking form than of old. "Sardines" turned up in an elegant and gregarious form. Instead of charades, titles of popular songs were enacted.

The parents made no suggestions or comments, but followed the leader all evening, and the lateness of the hour when the guests finally left proved the success of the party.

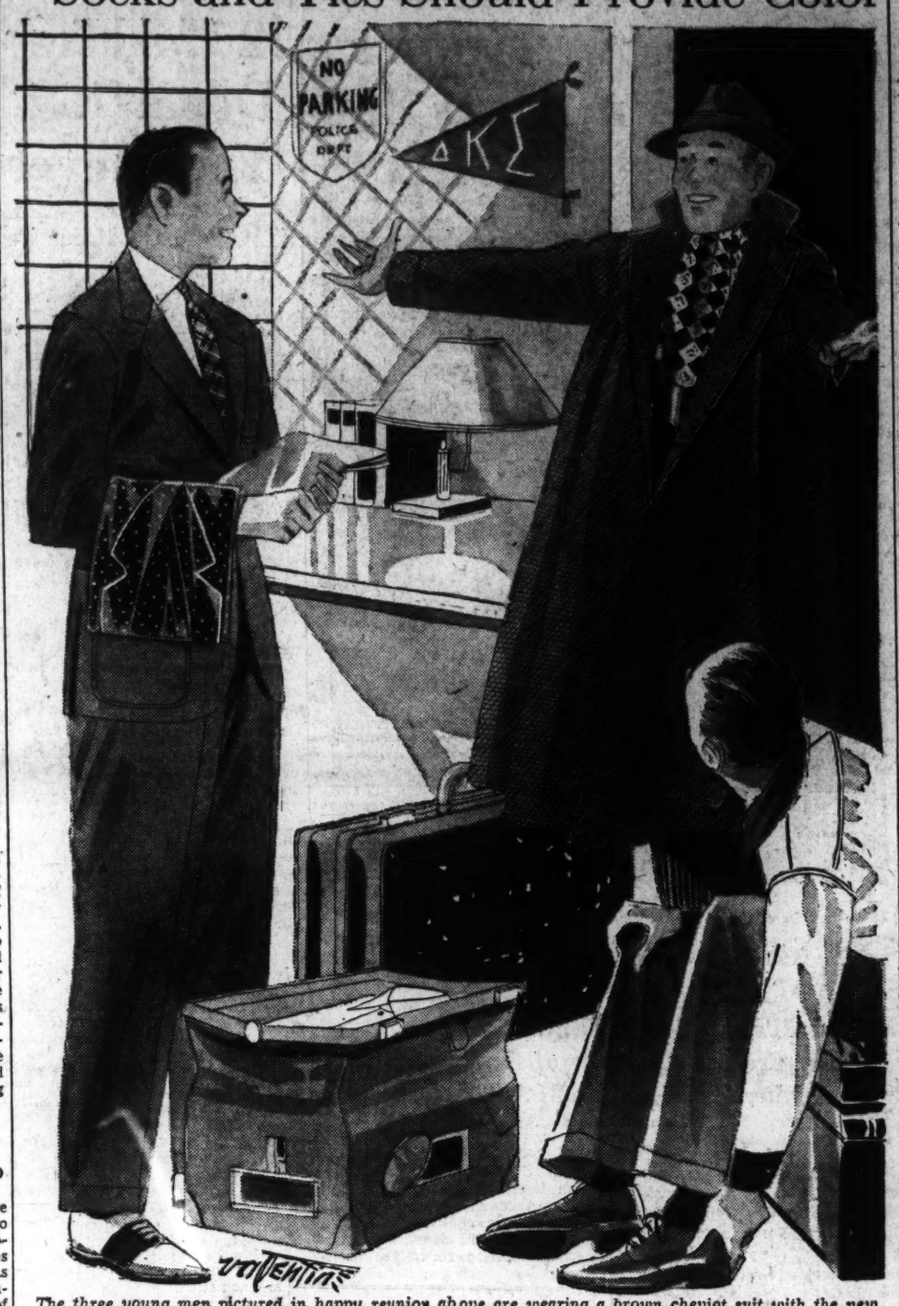
If adults would not plan quite so much or insist on the conventional forms of entertainment for their children's parties, both they and the children would enjoy the affairs much more. A hospitable and cordial welcome, and the skeleton materials for a good time such as bare floors, a radio or phonograph, and some simple food, are all that young people need for a good time.

Dancing Teachers Note Trend to Slower Tempo

That parents are turning to the dancing class to teach manners to modern youth, and that young people are growing tired of fast dances and yearn for a slower tempo, was revealed at the fifty-seventh convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing held recently in New York.

Certain parents who think manners are disappearing think this can be prevented through an art in which traditions of elegance and informality still linger, said the teachers. They are of the opinion that tapping and other fast steps are on the wane, and that the more graceful ballet is returning to favor.

Conservative Note Prevalent in Suits; Socks and Ties Should Provide Color



The three young men pictured in happy reunion above are wearing a brown cheviot suit with the new two-vent back, a rabbit's fur hat with self-color band, a Dungannon tweed English-cut topcoat, Scotch plaid tie, silk foulard neck handkerchief and flannel sports shirt. The pajamas just unpacked are of a bright polka-dot on dark background, and the gentleman at the right is putting on a pair of the new plain tip, three eyelet, short blucher shoes—brown, of course.

Rabbit's Fur Tyrolean Hat Is New Fashion Note for Collegians.

By John Q. Alexander.

ALL THE WORLD'S a stage, perhaps, but most men just get walk-on parts. If you want to play the hero, you've got to wear his costume.

The last beaux of summer will be blooming this week-end. For Labor Day (oh, Labor Day!) is the signal for a final fling at sun-kissed gayety; the day when all the Camp Aw Gwans and all the On-Come-On Inns will be overflowing; the culmination of those warm weeks when young men fall at the feet of lovely girls and the beginning of the season when autumn leaves do likewise.

Everyone's out for fun. But, dear unseen audience, you'll never get to first base if you don't look the part of a Lothario. No sweet young things will come up to view your etchings; no blue-eyed blondes will want to feel your muscle through an old, dilapidated sweater; no smoldering brunettes will curl up among your own particular cushions. In short, unless you're becomingly garbed, you'll make no more impression than a pebble dropped into the Atlantic.

This week, then, we've chosen fine feathers that are particularly adaptable for week-end wear. They serve a double purpose in that they are also entirely suitable for the coming school year.

Rabbit's Fur Tyrolean Hat.

Collegians who are wondering about that wardrobe will do well to stick to the conservative in the matter of suits and overcoats and let themselves go, if they must, on lesser articles like ties and socks and accessories. All items mentioned today are in excellent taste, designed for youth and built to withstand wear and tear.

The rabbit, heretofore popular only with children and other rabbits, has suddenly come into his own as a major contributor to the betterment of man, sartorially speaking. His latest contribution is a rabbit's fur felt Tyrolean hat, tops for campus and knockabout wear. It has a high dented tapering crown and brim curling up sharply at the back. The crocheted band is of self-color and they'll give you a feather to put in it if you like. There's an Alpine breeze about the whole thing that is worth yodeling about, and the cost is a mere bagatelle—$5.00.

Robert Fairchild, of Men's Wear Magazine, who knows about such things, has given this hat his official sanction, forecasts wide acceptance of it this fall, and further decrees that the preferred color will be green.

This same store, incidentally, has a fine new Scotch-grain plain-tip short blucher shoe which is good looking, yet constructed for heavy duty. It is brown, the best color for fall, in the new three-eyelet version, and should be extremely popular with university men for both town and country wear, $5.00, and you can get the monk-front inverted calf model at the same place for the same price.

Next to frost on a window pane, our favorite pattern is Scotch plaid. Now, to our immense gratification, the genuine colorings and designs of 12 famous Scottish clans have been faithfully reproduced in handsome silk and wool poplin ties. They're the smartest, most serviceable ties we've seen in a long time, and won't wrinkle, $1.50 each, and hoot, mon!—worth that even in Sandy MacGregor's money.

For a touch of color (there's nothing like a touch of color) a large, gay silk foulard handkerchief is both useful and ornamental. These are strictly for sports wear, to be worn either in your breast pocket or tied Ascot-fashion round your neck, in which case you can forget about a regular tie—or even a shirt, if you like. They are smart, flattering and debonair, and cost $1.50. The handblocked ones, with horses rushing around (playing polo) and other designs, are $2.50 and $3.50.

While you're at this store, look at the new pajamas of sateen broadcloth (it doesn't shine but has a dull sheen) in various designs on a dark background—something new, it being usually the other way around. These are well-tailored, with piped edges at the collar and cuffs, and are swell for lounging as well as sleeping.

Flannel Shirts for Sport Wear.

Another item not strictly for young men is a brand-new pure wool flannel sports shirt. It comes in plain colors and large, bold plaids. Unless we miss our guess, you'll see plenty of these on the best golf courses this fall. Fine for any sports wear, of course. And cut with an eye to comfort, with a wide-flare collar which may be worn either buttoned or opened, and a shirred back to give you plenty of room for action. Collar and cuffs are of dark plain material (a practical idea), $8.00, and of definitely superior quality. Wear the plaid shirt with plain dark slacks and the plain shirt with herringbone or ever-plaid slacks and you'll look like a young executive on his day off.

We've discovered another outstanding suit for young men. Choice of imported cheviot or Shetland fabrics, fresh from the Isle of Dungannon, which is off the coast of Scotland in case you're interested in geography. It is of the new cut to be featured this fall—perfectly plain back, except for three small tucks in each shoulder and two side vents instead of one center vent. Available in browns, grays and heather mixtures, in single or double breasted models—the former being better for school wear. Construction is soft and formal throughout, $40 and $50, and guaranteed to wear like iron.

This haberdasher also has an English model raglan topcoat with a very full draped back (12 inches more than the ordinary raglan), slash pockets (with button), adjustable cuff straps, etc. Comes in overchecks and rough weaves, reminiscent of Harris tweeds but softer to the touch.

Key to Vitality Is Relaxation, Doctor Asserts

Taking It Easy Declared Best Health Lesson Women Can Learn.

By Dudley Harmon.

THE MOST important lesson the modern woman has to learn is that of relaxation. In the hustle and bustle of everyday life, conservation of nervous energy by relaxation should be her aim.

She must relax muscles when they are not called upon to work. When she sits down, she must remain at ease, not erect and rigid with jaws clenched and every muscle strained. She must cultivate restful habits of thought. Instead of fretting and worrying when left to herself, she must concentrate on some mind picture, such as the image of a calm and quiet lake, which is soothing and mentally relaxing.

Such is the advice which Dr. Elizabeth Sloan Chesser gives to women in her recent book entitled, "Vitality" (New York; Oxford University Press, $2.50). In this book, Dr. Chesser explains that the woman whose index finger is stained a deep yellow from incessant smoking, who lies awake nights worrying about what to wear the next morning, who has a scene with the cook if the roast is not done to a turn, is nine times out of ten suffering from that increasingly prevalent modern disease called "nerves."

Depressed Feeling Is Symptom.

The business woman who hurries home to cook supper after work, the housewife who does all her own chores and plays nursemaid to her children, are both an easy prey to nervous disorders. All of us at one time or another have known that depressed, let down feeling, says Dr. Chesser, that sense of discouragement and fear that life is not worth living after all. While this mental state is usually far from being serious enough to warrant special psychoanalytical treatment, it is nevertheless enough of a handicap to interfere with the business of sane and happy living.

Yet with a little thought and care we could easily rid ourselves of nervous disorders, says Dr. Chesser. Nerves, she states, are often the results of physical causes. Chronic ailments, dyspepsia, eyestrain, over work and dissipation—any one of these may be the underlying reason behind the nervous headache or the tendency to worry over trifles. When the digestive system is out of order, the mental balance cannot function as it should. When a woman is caught up in a whirl of social activity night after night, she acquires a restless craving for excitement comparable to the drink and drug habit associated with other forms of nervous ailments.

Concerned With Hidden Causes.

When a physical disability is the underlying cause of a nervous disorder, says Dr. Chesser, women will usually find that a visit to the physician will effect a cure. But what of the woman who, although in perfect health, feels depressed and discouraged, unable to cope with even the minor battles of life? What can she do to conquer a nervousness which arises from a cause more intangible than a physical ailment?

It is primarily for this type of woman that Dr. Chesser's lessons in relaxation are destined. Getting rid of nervous disorders is largely a matter of habit, she says. Such women have allowed the habit of nervous instability to establish a hold on them. This habit suggests a lack of will power and self-control which can only be remedied by an effort to turn the thought in right directions. An interest in others, a forgetfulness of self, and most important of all, relaxation in mind and body, are the three chief factors in mental hygiene, according to Dr. Chesser.

Educator Explains 'Low Brow' Speech

Fear of being considered artificial is the principal reason underlying the slovenly speech prevailing among many well-bred people, according to Gilbert Hudson, professor of music at Trinity College of London University.

Prof. Hudson believes cultured people are averse to taking up speech training or speaking too well because they are afraid of being thought stilted. He said in the opinion of such people literature consisted of the written word only, and that it was not good form to speak it too correctly, whereas on the contrary it should be regarded as living speech.

Soviet Leaders Crusade Against Jazz Dancing

War on modern dancing has been declared by Russian Soviet leaders. The organ of the young Communists has assailed the rhumba, tango and foxtrot as being "insidious enemies" of the Bolshevik regime and has called on young people of the Soviet Union to avoid them.

The newspaper said these dances especially threaten Moscow inasmuch as "criminal and strange elements have penetrated dancing courses in the universities."

New Type Pattern Designed For the Suburban Matrons

Pattern No. 845.

SUBURBAN life has brought a new type of dress into being. It's not a street dress, and it's not a house dress. It's the sort of thing the young matron slips into when she wheels Junior around the town, or goes for a bit of "girl-talk" with one of her friends.

This two-piece frock is just the dress we mean. Its sleeves are short, its skirt plain but roomy, its pockets a good place for shopping lists and spare handkerchiefs. It is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3½ yards of 39-inch fabric and ⅜ yard for the collar and cuffs.

Ankle Length Pantaloons Return For Formal Autumn Occasions

By the United Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Ankle-length pantaloons have returned for formal wear in the fall and winter fashions of Elsa Schiaparelli.

While fashion critics and international buyers gasped at sight of Schiaparelli's mid-Victorian revival, others were captivated by the Parisian smartness displayed in new creations in the salon of Lucien Lelong.

Schiaparelli turned to unusual and Lelong held to the chic and spritely.

Those pantaloons at Schiaparelli's though are decidedly something different. Evening gowns caught up in front reveal the straight, unfrilled lengths. Contrasting colors, brocaded lame capes and black tulle capes with tufted white fur fringes go with the distinctive fashion.

Evening silhouette is stressed by Schiaparelli in diagonal draping. Zipper fashions, folded shoulder-straps and sometimes round, shirred breast plates with jeweled belts are shown. Mannikins showing these gowns carried white masks with metal eyelashes to emphasize the effect.

Skirts are shorter and the neckline higher at Schiaparelli's. Coats of loaded fur, silver fox gloves instead of muffs and occasionally a silver fox pocket is shown on a hooded coat.

The hair is always worn in coarse silk or gold mesh hats, sometimes just covering the front of the head, and have quills standing up or fur tail running from the front to the back like a cockscomb.

Lelong is showing two evening silhouettes. One has a very full trained skirt, emphasizing the backline, in stiff taffetas, brocades and velvets. The other is of slender sheath crepe with a filmy chiffon cape flowing back.

Brighter shades go into the evening gowns at Lelong's this season. There is much cerise contrasted with midnight blue, rich purples and wines. Many of the gowns have necks and skirts trimmed with mink and ermine with the same furs making long full capes.

For the afternoon Lelong shows mostly blacks with high peasant necks often trimmed with ermine or mink. The sleeves are full. Dull blues, browns, purples and mulberry are shown occasionally.

Style Lies in Proportional Fitting of Clothes, Maybelle Manning, N. Y. Designer, Says

Fine Perfumes Now Available In Dram Vials

Problem of Taking Favorite on Trip Solved by Small Size Bottles.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AT LAST the solution to carrying one of your favorite perfumes a-traveling with you! No more of this losing half the contents en route and staining your best gown. No more of a suitcase reeking with concentrated fragrance! Now you may purchase a popular perfume in convenient little flacons (dram size) which are reproductions of the handsome, expensive bottles.

With this new size you can now try out half a dozen without feeling extravagant. You may have a perfume to match your mood, your costume, or the occasion, as the case may be.

The little flacons are really charming. Two or three, or even four of them on the dressing table add quite a luxurious touch.

It is the thoughtful hostess who will provide her guest with a small bottle of this delightful perfume.

The dram sizes come in two prices, $1.25 and $1.10. You have a choice of twelve scents.

Economical Compacts.

POWDERING your nose with a certain beautician's compacts is becoming quite the economical thing to do now that these compacts are so drastically reduced.

The $2.50 single compact is now $1.50; the $3.50 triple is only $2; and the $3 double is $1.75.

The color scheme of the compacts is silver and dark blue. They're given a final touch of chic by the design across the top—shooting stars.

Assorted Name Tapes.

NOT HALF as interesting as clothes to shop for, but just as essential to the girl going away to school, are name tapes. Measly little bothers, but better than burglar alarms for keeping her wardrobe, her towels and sheets and hankies and hose where they belong.

A certain downtown store gives you a choice of 22 types in assorted color combinations for very modest prices—144 for $3, 77 for $2 and 36 for $1.50.

Attractive Soap Offer.

IF YOU BUY your soap by the individual cakes, you pay two and three times more for it. The buyer of the toilet goods department in a local store is proving this to her customers by offering a large chest of 36 cakes of soap for $2.35.

The soap was made especially for this store and adapted to Washington water. A fine buy!

The chest itself will make a lovely hose and hanky box. Meantime it's an extremely decorative soap container.

Saddle-Stitched Bags.

THOSE of you who like sports clothes and tailored attire will literally go for the saddle-stitched bags featured in a downtown store.

These handsome accessories have a rugged air about them that suits them just exactly to tweeds and coarse woolens. Some are made of cowhide and others of shrunken pig. They're stitched in a coarse thread that gives them a certain swagger.

These bags come in green, brown, wine and natural. Belts are available in matching shades—belts of all sizes and in a variety of designs.

Mixing Bowl Sets.

SIX-PIECE mixing bowl sets in the blue willow pattern are just one of the many reasons why the domestic minded shopper finds the fifth floor of a local store a worth-while place to visit.

These ever-so-handy sets not only give a dolled up air to the kitchen, but they serve also as great little space savers besides. They may be used for mixing, and stirring, and storing away left overs in the refrigerators. The price? 94 cents for the set.

Fingernail Polish.

FINGERNAILS acquire the beauty of jewels if they're lacquered with a certain clear, smooth, and colorful polish featured in an F street store.

This polish comes in seven lovely shades. Probably the loveliest is the Japanese sun tan, a dusky, rosy color.

You know what it means to be bothered with a polish which goes on unevenly, and peels easily. No such trouble with this! Of a nice consistency, it is highly recommended for staying on and going on smoothly.

Boy Scout Lamp.

THE fond mother who numbers a Boy Scout in her brood has an opportunity close at hand to surprise him with a gift he's sure to like. A Boy Scout lamp! One of the trickiest, little novelties that ever sold for $1.

A plaster scout, painted in life-like colors, boasts an electric globe for his head, and a metal shade for his hat. The light may be cast in several directions by maneuvering the hat-shade.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Apparel Should Be Cut To Meet Physical Outlines

In contrast to her preference for daring and extreme evening gowns, Maybelle Manning, well known designer, favors plain and conservative street clothes.

Modiste Takes Precise Notes on Customer's Figure; Shapes Dress to Hide Detractions, Enhance More Pleasing Features.

Just what is the basis of style? Can you have it despite physical defects? Maybelle Manning, foremost American designer, discusses these questions in the following article, fourth in a series of interviews with well-known couturiers.

By Frances Mangum.

HUNDREDS have wondered what is the keynote to style. Maybelle Manning says it's proportion.

Miss Manning began her career as designer down in Texas. Now she has her own dress salon on Park avenue in New York, and there she delights in creating clothes "like nobody else's."

She's interested in colors, materials, and all the sundry things that should interest designers, but mention proportion in connection with style and she becomes eloquent.

"Style, chic, is determined by proper proportions," vehemently declared Miss Manning. "A dress is made or marred purely and simply by its proportions. When a customer comes to me I am very particular about taking precise figure notes—flat chest, slumped shoulders, thick waist, short limbs, etc. And then I design her dress, or her wardrobe, and fit it according to her proportions. This makes for grace and better balance."

Remarks Not to Be Ignored.

Miss Manning's remarks about physical detractions, such as thick waists, were not to be lightly passed. What, after all, would she do to help a client look like a modern Venus?

To her such a query was easy to answer. If the client was flat-chested, "poof!" She would create an illusion of alluring curves by fullness in the dress top, shirring, pleating, or gathering. She might even use full sleeves to help. They always do, she said.

And suppose the client was anything but sylphlike around the waist? Then Miss Manning would attach a cape, a casual jacket, a scarf, or a fisher. No, no sash. A sash, she said, only emphasizes the plus inches.

There are innumerable little "ways and means," she said, which a designer has to know. Not least among them is how to design for the younger generation.

In her opinion this is no easy task because "these young things are so appallingly tall."

"It is much easier to create a dress for a medium-sized person," she said. "The proportions—if I may use the word again—are far easier to manage."

Just as Miss Manning's clothes are extreme, so are her preferences. More than anything she likes to design evening frocks. Next, street clothes.

"My evening dresses," she said, "are daring. Ultra sophisticated. My street dresses, very simple and conservative."

Although at the time of the interview her models were not quite ready for the fall season, she had "plans." She was going to use more belts, and they were going to be more dashing than ever. There would be scads of buttons; on sleeves for front effects, and down the back. And these buttons, as she expressed it, would be "more interesting than ever." And collars, too. More collars. More startling collars, and in an amazing variety!

Dazzling Colors for Fall.

Colors? Oh yes, the fall colors are going to be dazzling, but she is particularly interested in rusts. Vivid rusts, that will be stunning with black.

Miss Manning, as an outstanding American designer, is one who is proving that all fashions need not be Parisian to be smart. She sees no reason why America should bow to any country in fashion. And she backs her viewpoint by the models which are daily turned out in her bemirrored workrooms in New York.

Her rise to the crest of the fashion world is one of those stories as strange, if not stranger, than fiction. It all began back in Texas. She designed her own clothes and inevitably they attracted attention. Gradually people began to ask her to design theirs. And then came an order from a store. Miss Manning immediately set to work on some crisp taffetas and magnolia-like organdies. Southern belle dresses, she calls them. They were to sell from $100 to $200 apiece. And they did sell; so rapidly in fact that repeat orders kept her busy. More stores ordered, and always re-ordered. His fame for this type of dress reached the ears of a New York store owner. He put in a modest order, and, lo, the dresses even in the North went like proverbial hot cakes.

Clientele Grows in New York.

So, to New York came Miss Manning. Here her clientele grew rapidly among women who wanted to be smartly dressed and who could pay the piper for the privilege. Stage folk came to her to design their clothes. Producers, among them the late Flo Ziegfield, would leave the costumes for shows entirely in her hands.

Only recently dramatic critics, while panning a Broadway play, regretted that the plot and the acting could not be as successful as Manning's gowns which the star was wearing.

Food Infection Can Be Avoided By Precautions

Dishes Prepared From 12 to 24 Hours Should Be Cooked Again.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE was a time—not so long ago—when we recognized the several types of bacteria by their appearance under the microscope. They were rendered visible because they were stained with aniline dyes, and some were found to stain differently from others. Nowadays we are much more interested in what bacteria do than in what they look like. If they behave in a certain special manner, that fact serves to classify or pigeonhole them.

In this way we group bacteria and find those that closely resemble each other yet possess certain distinctive properties. For example, although the bacteria that normally occur in the colon (colon bacilli) and typhoid bacilli have some qualities in common, they are quite different in their effects upon the human body. Between these two groups there is an intermediate or half-way group, known as Salmonella suipestifer, is responsible for hog cholera. This latter organism is of interest to us because it has been shown to be the causative factor in many outbreaks of food poising in man.

Unfortunately the Salmonella organism can be present in food and not alter its appearansce, taste, or smell. The commonly accepted idea that poisonous foods must possess a bad odor or exhibit some obvious signs of decay is incorrect. Water may be sparkling and have a pleasant taste, yet it may harbor typhoid bacilli. So meat, milk, cheese, and other foods may be contaminated with vicious bacteria without the slightest change in taste or appearance. No one wishes to harbor in his digestive tract hog cholera bacilli, but this is exactly what may occur if contaminated food is eaten.

Group Causes Most Epidemics.

Many persons will suffer one or more attacks of food infection each summer. Every attack cannot be traced to the hog cholera organism but most epidemics will be found to be due to one of three members of the Salmonella group. The staphylococcus aureus has also been traced to its lair as an infecting factor in milk, canned food, cake, etc.

Symptoms usually manifest themselves in from 6 to 12 hours after eating infected food, although they are sometimes delayed for two or three days. Much depends upon the rapidity of growth of the bacteria. There is usually an acute inflammation of the gastrointestinal tract, accompanied by nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain, and diarrhea. At times the pain and nausea may simulate an attack of appendicitis. The temperature is never very high, but the patient is restless and weak. As a rule, unless other irritating foods are piled into the digestive tract, the acute symptoms will last but a day or two, and the Salmonella organisms will disappear from the intestine in from a week to ten days.

One of the all-important problems in treatment is the prevention of water loss. Because of vomiting and the fluid character of the bowel discharges, the patient's tissues and blood are often drained, and water must be given quickly in order to avoid collapse. If boiled water by mouth cannot be retained, it may be necessary to administer salt solution under the skin. At any rate a safe water balance must be maintained.

Bullfight Arenas Provide New Field For Spanish Women

The ladies of Spain are forging ahead in their recently adopted careers as bullfighters.

At the head of the brigade is Juanita Cruz, who has killed 100 toros and appeared in more than 50 arenas. Two sisters, Amalia and Enriqueta Palmeno, were awarded an ear from the bulls they had killed in a recent appearance. This is regarded as one of the highest honors given in the ring.

The height of every bullfighter's ambition is achieved when he is awarded the tail of the animal.

Apart from the above-mentioned aspirants to fame, there are many senoritas who take part in the spectacles known as "comic bullfights," where incompetent amateurs stab repeatedly at the bull before killing it.

Arrival of Cooler Days Stirs Appetites For Return of Roast to Sunday Menu

U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

The roast leg of lamb, illustrated above, is a good choice as the nucleus of a substantial Sunday dinner. It is most economical for the proportion of meat to bone is large enough to leave plenty of delicious cold meat after the hot roast is served.

Family Will Welcome Lamb as Respite From Cold Plates.

NOW that summer is on the wane and the weather is gradually getting cooler, roasts are in order for Sunday dinners. A hot Sunday dinner will be welcomed by the family this weekend as everyone, more or less, is tired of the usual salads and cold plates of the last several months.

When shopping for your roast, choose either a breast or leg of lamb. If you decide on a leg of lamb be sure to select one to include some of the loin. Leave the fell on. It is now believed that the flavor is not affected by the fell and a leg of lamb keeps its shape better if cooked with it on.

Size of Oven a Major Factor.

To roast this cut, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and rub well with flour. Lay the roast, skin side down, and cut flesh side up, on a rack in an open pan without water. If the fat covering is very thin, lay several strips of bacon on top. Sear for 30 minutes in a hot oven (about 480 degrees F.), or if bacon has been added, for a shorter time so as to avoid overbrowning. When the meat is seared and lightly browned, reduce the oven temperature rapidly to 300 degrees F. and continue the cooking at this temperature without water and without a cover. By this method basting is generally not necessary.

The length of time required to roast a leg of lamb depends chiefly on the size of the leg and the temperature of the oven. A leg weighing five pounds will probably require from two and one-half to three hours, including searing, and a seven-pound leg from three to three and one-half hours, to cook to the well-done stage.

If you have a roast meat thermometer, to stick into the thickest part of the roast, you can avoid all guesswork as to when the meat is done. If you like your lamb slightly underdone, remove it from the oven when the meat thermometer registers 175 degrees F. Cook it to 182 degrees F. for well-done lamb.

Maybe your family is partial to the breast of lamb rather than the leg. If so, select one that is tender and of good flavor. You will find that the breast is the least expensive cut. It is usually trimmed off the length of the rib chops, in one piece with the foreshank. Be sure to have the butcher crack the bones so that it can be carved between the ribs. Remove the foreshank, cut off the meat from the bone, and grind it for the stuffing.

Make a pocket in the breast by cutting through the flesh close to the ribs. Sprinkle the inside of the pocket with salt and pepper, pile in the hot stuffing lightly, and sew the edges together. Rub the outside with salt, pepper and flour. Lay the stuffed breast, ribs down, on a rack in an open roasting pan. Do not add water. Place the roast in a hot oven (480 degrees F.) and sear for 30 minutes. If there is not sufficient fat to keep the meat from drying out, baste with fat, or lay a strip or two of bacon on top. After searing, reduce the oven temperature rapidly to 300 degrees F., and continue cooking in the open pan until the meat is tender. The total time required will probably be 1½ to 1¾ hours. If there is more stuffing than the breast will hold, bake it in a separate dish, or use it as stuffing for onions to serve with the meat. Serve with brown gravy made from the drippings.

Tradition associates peas with lamb, but there is no rule, social, dietary, culinary, or any other requiring that peas should always be served with it. Buttered shredded string beans, quick-cooked spinach, or turnips, white or yellow, broccoli, brussels sprouts, or cauliflower are equally good with lamb.

Cheese Pie Varies The Summer Menu

Method of Mixing Ingredients Is Important.

By the Associated Press.

Stillwater, Okla.—As a tasty summer dessert with an abundance of good food elements, cheese pie is recommended by Miss Ruby Lambert, home economics student at Oklahoma A. & M. College.

Ingredients for one medium-size pie: Two cups of cottage cheese, 4 eggs, 1 cup top milk or cream, 2 tablespoons of flour, 1 cup sugar ½ tablespoon of salt and 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Miss Lambert explains that the mixing method is important. The cottage cheese should be put through a sieve several times. Mix the flour, salt and sugar and add the cottage cheese; then beat the eggs together and add them. The vanilla is added last and the whole mixture is beaten with an egg whip until smooth.

Then the mixture may be put into a graham cracker crust and baked at a temperature of about 250 degrees for 45 minutes. When done, the top will be well rounded and golden brown.

Wider Skirts Appear.

Paris, Aug. 29.—Wider skirts appeared as winter fashion show openings reached their height.

Many stained velvet and change-able silk afternoon frocks were designed with fairly full skirts falling in soft folds. Crepe wool frocks had knife pleated skirts.

The skirts in suits and many day dresses, however, retained their slender, tubular lines.

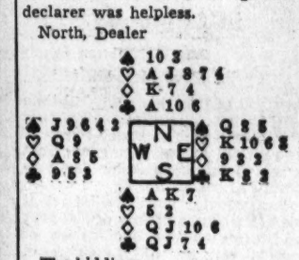
Locking Out Declarer.

While errors usually contribute to the fireworks in the more spectacular hands, the kibitzer who is a true connoiseur gets a real thrill from watching the moves and counter-moves of expert players as they maneuver in attack and defense.

In today's hand South's technique was faultless, but East and West's defense was brilliant, and against it declarer was helpless.

North, Dealer



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Play.

West opened the four of spades and East's Queen fell to the King. With two suits to be set up South properly chose diamonds as the first one to develop, since it was necessary to remove the Ace of diamonds which, if held by West would be a sure reentry to his possible five-card spade suit. West ducked two rounds and finally took the Ace on the third lead, returning the Jack of spades.

With the club finesse still to be taken, South refused to win this trick, hoping that if the finesse went wrong East would then be unable to return his partner's suit. When West was allowed to hold the Jack, however, he realized all hope of bringing in his own suit was gone. From the bidding it appeared unlikely enough tricks could be developed in clubs to defeat the contract, and the only successful shift therefore would be to hearts. Accordingly, he led the nine.

Dummy's Jack was won by East's King and a low heart returned, West's Queen being won with dummy's Ace. Dummy's eight of hearts was played and East won the trick with the ten. Declarer had hoped hearts would split and his opponents be compelled to make a lead which would put him in his hand, or the defense would slip.

East, however, was not to be lured from the defensive trail his partner had blazed. He returned the six of hearts, throwing the lead back to dummy, and with no entry to his hand to cash the Ace of spades or Jack of hearts, declarer was compelled to surrender a club and the setting trick to East's King.

Peacock Shoots 62, Ties Own All-Time Record at Indian Spring

Eight Birdies And Eagle On Card

Has a 31 on Each Nine; Never Off Fairway or in a Trap.

Over Par on One Hole; Later Registers 69 in Afternoon.

By Dave Herman.

EQUALLINB his own all-time District unofficial amateur course record, Roger Peacock, 24-year-old Indian Spring ace, shot a remarkable 62, 9 under par, yesterday at Indian Spring.

Peaoock tied the mark he set at his home course in July of last year and came within one stroke of carved out by Al Houghton in March of 1934 at Washington Golf and Country Club.

The former District and Maryland amateur champion made his 62 in a morning jaunt about the course with Jules Henderson, club member. With plenty of shots still left in his bag, he came back in the afternoon to hammer out a 69 playing with Leo Walper, driving range professor, and Russ Hollebaugh.

Under Par for 36.

Thus for the 36 holes, Peacock was 11 under par—a new District record for this distance.

Peacock had eight birdies and an eagle during his eventful trip. He holed all of his putts. He wasn't in a single trap, and wasn't off the fairway once. He had a 31 on each nine.

His putting was the acme of perfection—no 3-putt greens, 14 putts for the first nine and 12 for the second.

Over Par on 14th.

He considered his latest 62 a more remarkable score than his round of last year in that he was over par one one hole yesterday—the short fourteenth, where he hooked his tee shot, chipped short with his second and then fought back for his four. This, he pointed out, ordinarily would unnerve a golfer, but it was not true in Peacock's case. Undaunted, the youngster boomed a lustry drive and low iron on the 483-yard fifteenth and sank a six-foot putt for an eagle three.

Peacock's two brilliant rounds fired him with greater confidence in his quest for honors in the National Amateur championship at Cleveland. He will leave early next week for Cleveland to prepare for the big all-match play event.

Birdie 3 on First.

A 15-foot putt gave him a birdie 3 on the first, andhe sank a 10-footer for a birdie three on the third, a 12-footer for a birdie 3 on the fifth, and pitched dead for his birdie 4 on the seventh.

Peacock nailed a 3-footer for a birdie on the twelfth and an 8-footer for a 3 on the thirteenth. His brassie second on the 525-yard sixteenth anchored 12 feet from the pin, and he missed another eagle by inches. Roger rolled in a 20-footer for a deuce on the seventeenth, and, after being to the right of the eighteenth green in 2, he chipped dead to preserve his par.

In the afternoon Peacock played the back nine first, scoring an even par 36. At the sixth he was 2 over par for the 14 holes. Then followed an amazing finish. He shot 3, 3 ,3, 3, eagling the seventh. He won from Walper, 2 up.

Dates Changed For Shooting Of Doves

Maryland and Virginia Are Included in List of States Affected.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—In answer to numerous protests from the South, the Biological Survey today announced dove shooting in Southern States would begin and end ten days earlier than originally provided in the 1935 Federal hunting regulations.

Approved by President Roosevelt, the new amendment makes the mourning-dove season September 21 to January 5 in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexco, Arizona, and California.

Privileges Equalized.

Formerly set to open October 1 and close January 15, the season was changed to equalize privileges of dove hunters throughout the country. State laws prohibiting October and early November shooting in the interest of upland game birds resulted in a practically closed season on doves in some States under the original provisions of this year's Federal regulations.

The President's proclamation also included amendments to clarify regulations that inadvertently caused restrictions not intended, a biological survey statement said.

One of the provisions corrected would have made 4 p. m. the daily closing time for waterfowl hunting, apply also to the shooting of rails (other than coot), woodcock, mourning doves and band-tailed pigeons. The new amendment provides that these birds may be hunted from 7 a. m. to sunset.

Another Correction.

A second correction will make it possible for hunters in blinds or legal floating craft to hunt within 100 feet of natural vegetation that may be some distance from shore. The original provision limited hunting areas within 100 feet of vegetation continuous with the shore, a degree of restriction not essential to the regulation's purpose of preventing open-water shooting of the diving ducks, which have been found to be more seriously depleted in numbers than other species.

A "legal floating craft," officials explained, is any boat not moved by power and not equivalent to a "sink box." Power boats, sailboats or floating craft towed by power or sailboats are prohibited for duck shooting, along with "sneakboats" and "sink boxes."

Stevens Shoots a 67 At Congressional

The epidemic of "subparitis" spread to Congressional, where Claggett Stevens, young assistant professional, batted out a 67, 5 under par, for one of the lowest rounds of the season at his home course.

Stevens went out in 31, 6 under par, with birdies on the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and ninth and an eagle three on the eighth. He shot a 36 coming home, failing to get a single birdie on the back side.

Jack McCarron, Harvey Cobb and Maj. Frank Davison played with him. His card:

Semi-Finals Reached by Mrs. Vare

Philadelphian Is Victor Over Miss Abbott by 4 and 3.

Has Birdie on Last Hole; Will Play Marion MacDougall.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 29.—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, entered the semi-finals of the national women's golf championship today by routing Elizabeth Abbott, Los Angeles, 4 and 3.

As her opponent suddenly developed a wild streak, Mrs. Vare rallied to win the seventh, eighth and ninth holes with two pars and a birdie to go 2 up at the halfway mark. Glenna missed a 2-footer for a birdie on the seventh, but squared the match as Miss Abbott hit a trap.

Miss Abbott won the thirteenth in par 3 by laying a dead chip for a 5-foot putt as Glenna missed the green with her spoon. Glenna got it back again on the fourteenth with a par five as Miss Abbott needed four pokes to reach the green. The match ended brilliantly on the fifteenth as Glenna pitched a foot from the pin for a birdie four and Miss Abbott sank a 10-footer for her par after whacking her tee shot into a marsh.

Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, gave the large home town gallery another thrill by joining Mrs. Vare in the semifinals with a 4 and 3 victory over Marion MacDougall, of Portland, Ore. She and Mrs. Vare will meet tomorrow.

Charlotte Glutting, of West Orange, N. J., blasted another title dream for Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City veteran, by defeating her, 2 and 1. The turn of their match came on the sixteenth hole when Mrs. Hill penalized for soling her club in a sand trap.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 29.—The Giants shook off their losing spell today, beat the Dodgers, 7 to 5, and cut the league-leading Cardinals' lead to a game and a half.

After four straight losses, the Terrymen cut loose with 15 hits against a trio of Brooklyn pitchers while Clydell Castleman, after surviving a bad third inning, rallied to go the full route and gain his twelfth victory of the season. The Dodgers bunched five of their ten hits in the third to score four runs and take a brief lead.

WHILE soprano screams echoed shrilly through Central High stadium, little blue-eyed Josie Samperton scampered on a highly important 50-yard run over the school's football field late yesterday to give Sherwood Playground a second place in the shuttle relay and its second straight interplayground girls' track and field championship.

Going into the relay, last event of the day, only four points ahead of its spirited rival, Georgetown Playground, Sherwood faced not only a favored Georgetown relay team, but the necessity of taking second place to win the championship. A third place would not be enough, for, providing Georgetown should win the relay as it proceeded to do, the totals would be 20 points apiece at the close of the meet.

But the Sherwood quartet of Naomi Sawyer, Gladys Sawyer, Louise Morrison and the 14-year-old Josie Samperton was equal to the task of protecting its scant laed. Not quite fas enough to turn back the Georgetown girls, Dorothy Kaedy, Lillian Dixon, Virginia Beech and Viola Beck, they nevertheless carried their conspicuous plaid trunks over the 200-yard distance fast enough to finish ahead of Hoover Playground, the third-place team, thereby clinching the title which they won last year.

Virginia Avenue Third.

Sherwood finished with 22 points, Georgetown with 20, and Virginia Avenue, 15; Hover, 13, and Takoma Park, 12, to acount for the first five teams.

When the Samperton young lady flitted across the finish line with the winning points, the Sherwood team went into many cases of mild hysterics. It meant that the girls from Northeast Washington had proved the class of 2,000 of the city's foremost feminine athletes, ranging in age from 7 to 17 years, that they had successfully upheld the mythical responsibility of taking the girls'

J. Dean Beaten By Bucs, 5-1; Lead Cut

Jim Weaver Gives 7 Hits, Strikes Out 8 Cards; Traynor a Star.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 29.—The league-leading Cardinals succumbed to the fast-flying Pirates today, as Big Jim Weaver turned in one of the finest flinging jobs of his career to best the Great Dizzy Dean, 5 to 1.

The defeat left the Cards only 1½ games ahead of the second-place Giants, who defeated Brooklyn, and two in front of Chicago's Cubs, who trimmed Boston. It was Pittsburgh's eighth straight victory and left the Bucs only seven games away from the leaders.

Weaver outpitched Dean with a big margin to spare. He gave only seven hits, one a triple by Joe Medwick in the fourth, which led to the only Cardinal run. He struck out eight of the clouting Red Birds, getting three of them on strikes in the third. Jim Pitched his way out of a lot of trouble then, whiffing Jack Rothrock and Burgess Whitehead with the bases loaded.

Dean Grants Ten Hits.

Dean, owner of 22 triumphs this season, was touched for 10 hits as he dropped his eighth game. It was the third decision he had lost to the Bucs.

Manager Pie Traynor again played a big part in the Pirate victory. He connected for a triple and two singles, scoring one run and driving in another. Woody Jensen also hit three times, as did Lloyd Waner, who also got a three-bagger. Traynor's triple opened the seventh and he came home on Jensen's third hit. Paul Waner made the final tally in the eighth on his single, a sacrifice and Traynor's one-bagger.

Barnes, Ex-Nat, Ruled Ineligible

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 29.—Herb Pennock, president of the Charlotte Piedmont League Club, today said he was putting Emil (Red) Barnes on baseball's ineligible list.

Barnes jumped the club yesterday to join a semipro team in Palatka, Fla. The outfielder came to Charlotte three years ago from the Southern Association.

Barnes was quarter back of Alabama's Rose Bowl champions of 1926 and after entering professional baseball performed with Washington and the Chicago Americans before being shunted into the minors.

Detroit Wins, 13-3, Over Browns

Gets Four Runs in First; Enemy Wilts Under 16-Hit Attack.

Greenberg Slams 34th Home Run; Gehringer Also Pounds One.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—The last-place Browns opened their final home stand of 1935 by dropping the first of a four-game series to the league-leading Detroit Tigers today, 13 to 3.

The tail-enders, whose recent ambush of the New York Yankees paved the way for Detroit's ascendency, wilted early under the Tigers' 16-hit attack. Two passes donated by Jim Walkup, a sacrifice by Charlie Gehringer, and singles by Fox, Hank Greenberg and Owen gave the visitors a four-run lead in the first inning and sent Walkup to the showers.

Coffman Also Fails.

Hal Coffman replaced him on the mound, buf fell victim to another batfest in the second when Mickey Cochrane, who had walked, scored on Gehringer's home run to the top of the right field pavilion. Greenberg followed with his thirty-fourth circuit blow of the season.

Take Off Leads All the Way to Win Marlboro's Feature Race

Daily Double Nets Pay-Off Of $114.90

Favorite Win 3 Races at Nearby Track; $21 on Stylish Mack.

By Walter Haight.

TAKE OFF took off and paid off yesterday at Marlboro. With Ray Booker, diminutive colored boy in the saddle. Take Off circled the popular Southern Maryland track like a scared rabbit to lead all the way and win the Howard W. Jackson purse, named in honor of Baltimore's mayor. It was a case of age before beauty for Take Off is no longer a youngster. Nine years ago he was foaled by Goldie Girl and he was the oldest horse in the race by three years.

Two lengths behind Take Off came a driving Jilted to take the second money from Silver Arch. One of the race's disappointments was the fact that the highly-touted Bond Entry of Small Change and Arctic Land failed to get any part of the money.

Sought Interest on Money.

The wise boys and girls had looked upon the Bond paid as a means of stealing interest on their money as a show betting proposition. There was much wailing and gnashing of teeth when Silver Arch beat Small Change out of third position.

However, backers of Take Off were satisfied, for those who played him across the board were rewarded with a surprise mutuel of $5.80, $3.80 and $48.10.

For the second day the daily double was productive of a substantial mutuel. Those who invested in the ticket No. 3-5 had $114.90 waiting for them under the pay-off shed. The horses that figured were Fairio, a $11.30 shot, in the first race and Stylish Mack, an ancient campaigner which paid $21.20 in his own right. Fairio was much the best in the opener but Stylish Mack's victory was a lucky one. After being ridden all over the track, This Play closed like an express train and would have been the winner in another stride.

Pays Unique Mutuel.

The favorite players had received another unique mutuel in the second race. Idle Worker, going to the post at 3-5, paid, $3.90, $3.10 and $3.10. The horse won like a 1-10 shot and gave his backers no anxious moments.

Follow On proved a worthy favorite in the fifth race with his rivals doing all the following. With Jockey E. DeCamillis doing the booting, the son of Negofol picked up 117 pounds and was never threatened. Dark Supinet, a 73-1 shot, was second and Edyth M. was third. The winner paid $4.50.

Apathy made it two straight victories for the course by scoring an easy win over Valdosta and Golden Play in the sixth race. The reward was $6.90. It was Palumbo's second winner of the day.

Bendromel won the final at $8.

Army of Idle Up 1.9% in Year To 10,015,000

More Workers reported in Manufacturing Industries.

New York, Aug. 29.—The total number of unemployed workers in July, 1935, was 10,015,000, according to the monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference board, made public today. This is an increase of 266,000, or 2.7 per cent, from the preceding month, and an increase of 189,000, or 1.9 per cent over July, 1934.

From June to July, 1935, the increases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: Trade, 122,000; manufacturing and mechanical industries, 56,000; mining, 45,000; domestic and personal service, 13,000, and miscellaneous, 7,000. Unemployment showed a decrease of 4,000 in transportation.

Compared with July, 1934, unemployment in July, 1935, increased 9.2 per cent in domestic and personal service; 6.9 per cent in mining, and 0.8 per cent in transportation. Unemployment decreased 6.6 per cent in manufacturing and mechanical industries, and 0.3 per cent in miscellaneous industries. The conference board's allowance of 320,000 for the net annual increase of gainful workers available for employment brought the estimate of total unemployment above the figure for July, 1934.

The following table prepared by the conference board shows the number of unemployed workers in the various industrial groups in July, 1934, and July, 1935.

Industrial Group.	Number of Unemployed. July, 1934	July, 1935
Mining	448,000	478,000
Manufacturing and mechanical	3,834,000	3,582,000
Transportation	1,261,000	1,271,000
Trade	1,159,000	1,159,000
Domestic and personal service	859,000	938,000
Industry not specified	490,000	489,000
Other industries (1)	296,000	296,000
All industries (2)	8,345,000	8,213,000
Allowance for new workers since 1930 census	1,461,000	1,802,000
Total unemployed	9,826,000	10,015,000

(1) This group includes agriculture, forestry and fishing, public service and professional service. The numbers given are the unemployed workers in 1930, satisfactory data being unavailable from which later changes in unemployment can be computed.

(2) Industrial classification includes 3,188,000 listed as unemployed in census of April, 1930.

Wheat Steadies, Halting Decline

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—The wheat market today gave the best demonstration of rallying power of the week, but prices were unable to make any headway toward higher levels.

After midsession values advanced more than a cent above early lows on buying, some of which was associated with advices from Canada indicating losses from rust, hail and frost damage might exceed expectations. The upturn was not maintained, however, in the face of rather persistent hedging and scattered liquidation attributed to Eastern sources.

At the close wheat was ⅜ cent lower to ¼ higher, compared with the previous finish, December, 89@89⅛, and corn was ½ point off to ⅜ up, December, 56¾@56⅞. Oats were ¼ down to ⅛ up; rye, ⅛ off, and barley, unchanged to 2 cents higher.

New York, Aug. 29.—The pound sterling gained the gold standard value a shade lower today in terms of dollars.

In London the dollar was a little firmer at 4.97⅛ to the pound and in subsequent transactions in New York this trend was maintained with the pound dropping back ⅛ of a cent to 34.97⅛ cents.

In Paris the dollar was likewise a trifle higher at the equivalent of 15.0023 cents to the franc, which gives the dollar a discount over the franc .00⅝ of a cent lower or 6.61⅜ cents.

Other currencies of Belgium and Switzerland showed small fractions of a cent against the dollar in New York dealings.

The controlled Italian lira rallied .00⅛ in New York to 8.19½ cents.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Move Forward Haltingly as Turnover Falls Under Million Shares—Bond Prices Stiffen —Pressure Put on Francs.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 29.—Financial markets continued their modest improvement, but trading activity declined. The turnover in stocks failed to reach the million-share mark for the first time in more than a month. Prices were irregularly higher at the close. Government bonds were still somewhat uncertain, but inclined to harden. Grains were little changed. September wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 87⅛ cents a bushel.

Steel, amusement, motor and airplane stocks looked the best. At times some members of those groups acted as though they would send the market into full advance. Steel gained about a point, as did General Motors, and Chrysler did better than that. Yellow Truck continued its strength. Columbia Pictures led the amusements with a jump of nearly 6 points. In less-well-known stocks some unusual strength and activity was shown. Examples were Type Founders preferred, Certain-teed common and preferred and Glidden. Their gains ranged from 1 to 8 points.

Tractions were mixed. I. R. T. and Manhattan dropped 1 to 2 points on a report showing a larger deficit. B. M. T. was firm in spite of reduced earnings. Kelvinator and Devoe & Raynolds, both under pressure recently, rallied 1 and 3 points, respectively, on what was said to be short covering. Oils were irregular on the threats of price cutting.

Large fractional gains were the rule for the mail orders, motor accessories, tobaccos, rubbers and rail equipments. Chemicals were mixed, du Pont following the motors. Silvers were rather buoyant and coppers held firm. The market showed a liking for the public utilities. North American and Pacific Gas rose a point. Consolidated Gas and Public Service gained fractions. Telephone and Western Union hardened more than a point each.

Rails made gains here and there, notwithstanding unsatisfactory earnings report for last month. On the whole the rail market was narrow. Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and New York Central moved up a point or so.

To Be Continued.

In lieu of much excitement in stocks, the financial community took more than the usual interest in the results of the Treasury's latest financing bit—the $100,000,000 offering of Federal Farm Mortgage 1½ per cents of 1939. As anticipated, the offering fell as a dud, comparatively speaking. The recent fall in comparable issues outstanding had led the financial community to expect no better than 99 bid on the issue, which was offered at auction, a thoroughly unpopular form of financing from the investment market's point of view.

Sugar Exports Rise 41 Per Cent in Year

New York, Aug. 29.—Refined sugar exports by the United States during seven months of 1935 totaled 47,120 long tons, compared with 33,275 tons in the same period in 1934, an increase of 41.6 per cent, according to Lamborn & Co. The exports are the largest for the period since 1929, when shipments were 64,336 tons. Practically every corner of the world is included in the 50 different countries to which United States refined sugars were shipped.

of the new issue was wanted, and the average price bid was 99. Just a year ago the Government offered a Home Owners Loan issue which was undersubscribed, the balance being taken by Government agencies. Something of the sort may be done with the unsold $15,000,000 of the F.F.M. issue.

In the financial district Secretary Morgenthau's remarks on the financing were regarded as characteristic, if not pleasing. It is considered by dealers here that the blame for the poor run of the farm notes was due to the method of offering them, namely, by auction. Admitting that the result of the auction was "not so good," Secretary Morgenthau maintained nevertheless that he did not believe the auction method had anything to do with it and that the system would not be abandoned. Wall Street's comment was that the virtue of persistence sometimes is scarcely distinguishable from a vice.

Francs Weaken.

For all the disappointment over the poor reception for the new Federal issue, the bond market in general improved. Government bonds continued the recovery which began yesterday on bank buying which followed the more attractive yields and which were accelerated by hints of Treasury support after bids had been made for the new issue.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

Advances	411	229
Declines	165	328
Unchanges	146	204
Total issues	722	761

Stocks—Moved forward drowsily at the slowest pace since early in July. Price gains were small and well distributed at the close. Utilities were a shade the best bought. Turnover was 903,150 shares.

Bonds—Late strength in Federals after early declines was the main feature. Failure of the latest Government issue by nearly $15,000,000 shook out a number of the loan holders. Conviction that the dissatisfaction was not with the issue but with the method of marketing it, caused the support. Transfers $10,785,000.

Curb—Utilities advanced and oils reacted, the general trend being toward a higher level. Turnover was off to approximately 200,000 shares.

Grains—Wheat rallied as much as a cent a bushel on reports of damage to the Canadian crop but persistent selling during the final hours wiped out most of the gains. September wheat final at 87, corn at 71, and oats at 25⅛.

Cotton—Reports of rain stimulated selling after early steadiness and prices were 2 to 15 points lower at the close, with October at 10.46.

Sugar—Raw sugar weakened and closed at 3.45. Refined unchanged at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee quiet. Santos No. 4 last at 8¼ and Rio No. 7 last at 6½.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 65⅜ cents per ounce. In London also unchanged at 29d. (65.01 cents).

Bar gold—Up ½d. in London to close at 140s. flat ($34.83).

$64,000,000 Drop In Brokers' Bonds

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $807,000,000 on August 28, representing a decrease of $64,000,000 for the week. The loans for the week ended August 29, 1934, were $641,000,000.

Leather Price Advanced.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—American Hide & Leather Co. is reported to have advanced prices of calf leather a full cent a foot, which represents a rise of 3 to 5 per cent over prices previously prevailing. Inside upper leather quotations have been advanced the equivalent of 3 to 4 per cent on various grades.

Clearing Pace Slows Here; Up In Other Cities

Local Gain of 23.6% Dips Below National Average.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A sharp slump in local bank clearings during the week ending Wednesday erased the lead that had been held over the national averages since early spring.

Washington debits reported in the seven-day period gained but 23.6 per cent over 1934, while the country as a whole ran 25.5 per cent ahead of its last year performance.

A total of $13,380,000 passed through the Washington Clearing House in the fourth week of August, generally regarded as the low water mark of the year's financial tides. The cash gain over last year was set at $2,558,155. Compared with the immediately preceding week, the total was $3,430,998, or 20.8 per cent lower.

Greater part of the Nation's gain was turned in by New York, which reported 31.6 per cent over last year. The 21 other leading cities of the country averaged but 15.8 per cent higher totals.

Clearings in New York City were almost twice the sum of all other large cities combined, with a total of $2,992,664,000. Aggregate for other centers was $1,562,972,000.

Capital Transit Income Gains.

A 22 per cent increase in passenger traffic carried by the Capital Transit Co. during July boosted the company's net income to $79,218 in the month, it was disclosed yesterday. In the same month of 1934 the comparable figure was $58,232.

Constantly more crowded automobile arteries have in the past year turned many Washington residents to the street cars and buses. Most conclusive evidence of this is the constantly mounting gross operating revenue of the public utilities.

During July the total intake of the street car company rose to $780,273 from $674,714 reported last year. Increased costs of personnel and additional motive and upkeep costs increased the operating expenses from $478,653 to $555,353.

Gas Light Income.

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday showed net revenue for July of $56,045, compared with $39,243 for July of last year, an increase of $16,802. Operating revenue for July, $382,632, compares with $351,045 for July a year ago, an increase of $31,587.

Interest deductions of $72,588 for July, 1935, were $2,705 more than last year's figure of $69,883, resulting in a net loss of $2,432 this year compared with 19,513 last year, or a decrease of $9,081.

The Georgetown Gas Light Co. showed a net loss of $9,117 for July, as compared with a loss of $9,057 for July of last year, an increase of $60.

Operating revenues this July were $67,522, as against $66,207 for July, 1934, an increase of $1,315. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $2,956, this year's figure being $72,237 against $69,281 for July, 1934.

The City Bank Farmers Trust Co., New York, successor trustee, is notifying holders of Potomac Electric Power Co. general and refunding bonds, series B, 6 per cent, due in 1953, that there has been drawn by lot for redemption out of sinking fund monies on October 1, 1935, at 105, $34,500 principal amount of the bonds.

The bonds drawn for redemption include 28 $1,000 bonds, two of $500 and five $100 bonds. Holders of the bonds have been notified that after October 1 interest on the 35 bonds will cease.

15,000-Mile Railroad Merger Of 3 Systems Proposed to I. C. C.

Plan to Unify Rock Island, Frisco, Chicago & Eastern Illinois Submitted by Bondholders' Committee Headed by Carter H. Harrison, Jr.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—One of the most far-reaching plans of railroad consolidation devised in the past quarter of a century and which, if fully carried out, would result in creating a Midwestern railroad system ranking as one of the 10 or 12 largest in the world, is being announced today by the protective committee for the 7 per cent and 6 per cent preferred stocks of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., now operated by trustees appointed by the Federal Court under section 77 of the Federal bankruptcy act.

The plan, which is addressed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, calls for a consolidation of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway Co. into one unified system. The plan is the first to be proposed under the amended Federal bankruptcy act as passed by Congress in the closing days of the recent session. It is also unique in the fact that it is built upon the idea of effecting this consolidation simultaneously with reorganization.

The proposed consolidation would create a great Middle Western railroad system with assets of nearly a billion dollars and operating nearly 15,000 miles of track. It would have direct access to every important terminal and shipping center in the Middle West and own its own lines to the Gulf ports of Galveston and Pensacola and have important connections at Mobile and New Orleans. It would be one of the most important factors in American agricultural life. It would create a company with a capitalization of approximately $800,000,000 and a financial structure adapted to the conditions existing in the railroad world today. With the exception of the creation of the Van Sweringen railroad empire, it is explained that no other proposal of such magnitude has been definitely worked out in several decades.

The consolidation is calculated to furnish the means for a continuing and growing improvement in service of the three roads, according to the committee, which is headed by Carter H. Harrison, jr., of Chicago, and which represents more than 4,000 Rock Island preferred stockholders, owning about 40 per cent of the outstanding $54,000,000 of stock.

"The railroads have reached such a degree of maturity," says the committee, "that most new capital expenditures should be made from earnings rather than by borrowing."

The plan proposes an outright consolidation of the three roads, which will in some degree affect most of the securities of all of them. One of the significant features of the proposed consolidation plan is the fact that it does not involve any advances from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other Government source or banking institution. Under the plan, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Railroad Credit Corporation and bank loans will be repaid out of earnings within eight years, and all underlying lien bonds, with a few exceptions, will be left undisturbed. First-lien bondholders, generally speaking, will be asked to re-

United Air Gains 20% in Sky Travel

Chicago, Aug. 29.—United Air Lines showed an increase of 20.2 per cent in passengers, 47 per cent in express and a substantially larger volume of air mail was carried the first seven months of this year over the same period of last year, W. schedule their maturities, and in some cases accept a modification of interest payments.

Holders of Rock Island common will receive one new $50 par common share for one $100 par common share now held upon payment of $2.50 per share, non-participants to receive an amount roughly equivalent to about $20 par value for every $100 par value now held.

Frisco preferred and common stockholders share equally in the plan, receiving half a share of new $50 par common for each old common share held, upon payment of $1.25 per share.

C. & E. I. preferred stockholders will receive half a share of new $50 par common with no payment required and another half share upon the payment of $1.25 for each half share. C. & E. I. common stockholders will receive half a share of new $50 par value common for each share held upon the payment of $1.25 per share.

Capitalization per mile will be about $54,000, comparing favorably with other roads of the country. Only two Western railroads have lower per-mile capitalizations, the Atchison with about $50,000 per mile and the Burlington with about $42,000. Besides these, only two roads in the country can show lower similar figures—Maine Central with $51,600 and Bangor & Arostook with $45,000.

The plan contemplates a board of directors with 19 members, 10 to be selected during various periods by the creditors and 9 to be elected annually by the stockholders.

Reserve Funds 2.78 Billions, New High Mark

Gain of $55,000,000 Is Reported for Week Ended Aug. 28.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that member bank reserves balances increased $55,000,000 during the week ended August 28, bring excess reserves to a new high level of $2,780,000,000.

Member bank reserve balances now total $5,346,000,000, an amount $1,219,000,000 in excess of the figure at this time last year.

Gold stocks rose $8,000,000 during the week to total $9,197,000,000, which was $1,216,000,000 more than last year.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended August 28, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,474,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 compared with the preceding week and an increase of $13,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On August 28 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,471,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with an increase of $55,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and a decrease of $13,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $8,000,000 in monetary gold stock and decreases of $39,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $17,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Member bank reserve balances on August 28 were estimated to be approximately $2,780,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Curb Prices Rise, Trading Slackens

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 29.—Most groups on the curb market moved higher today under moderate activity. Some of the oils were lower in sympathy with selling in that division on the big board. Utilities advanced.

A steady to firm tone marked American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Niagara Hudson Power, American Cyanamid "B," Hiram Walker, Newmont, Aluminum Co. of America and Swift International. Among petroleum shares, Gulf lost more than a point, while Humble was off fractionally.

Transfers approximated 200,000 shares compared with 218,000 yesterday.

Norfolk & Western Net Declines in July

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—A net income gain of more than $500,000 in July as compared with the corresponding month last year is revealed in a monthly financial statement issued here today by the Norfolk & Western Railway Co.

The net income declined, however, from the June figure to the extent of $417,380, a decrease caused by a heavy drop in revenue freight.

Not 'Modernistic.'

Chicago (AP).—It's "modern"— not "modernistic" — where steel-and-leather chairs and snub-nosed beds are concerned, says George B. Atkinson, furniture man here. "Modernistic" conveyed a sense of bizarreness, he said, not in keeping with furniture of utilitarian design.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Ah, Found! — By Harry J. Tuthill

Lost...in this jungle, and it's getting dark. One good thing is that for the last half-hour I haven't heard those soldiers chasing me.
What a break... getting away from that Dictatress, who wanted to throw a wedding for me.
Ah! At last... a road. Empty, too.
It looks like the one I traveled after getting out of the rocket.
It is. I remember. Here's where I sat down to think about those cuckoos telling me this is the year 7324.
How dizzy. Well... Oh oh! I hear someone coming.
The soldiers! I think they saw me... and are following... yes, they're shouting... gaining on me. Well, I hate to quit after all that running I did, but my feet are....
What's that? My word! The Rocket!

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Dearborn, Mich., Aug. 29.—Henry Ford is paying 1,700 boys to go to school.

I discovered this today when, lured like every other curious visitor to Detroit, I traveled out to Dearborn to see the Ford plant. The result was that I spent the entire day in the Ford Trade School and never saw a single next season's motor coming down the "line."

Way back in 1916, the automobile manufacturer founded a vocational school, with six boys and one instructor. Today it has a village of bright-faced youngsters enrolled in a four-year school. This is the plan:

Lads from 13 to 15 years of age enter. They have their lessons divided thus: One full week of academic training, and two weeks of shop work. They come to school at 7:30 a. m. and are excused at 2:45 p. m.

Aren't Executives' Sons.

These youngsters aren't sons of Ford executives, learning the business from the bottom up. They are needy boys, only about 30 per cent being sons of the plant's employes. About 5 per cent of them are orphans, a quarter of them are sons of widows, 10 per cent have fathers either too old to work or in some fashion handicapped. The young candidates for the school are sometimes accepted at the urgence of the local welfare agencies; sometimes sent by the juvenile court. Quite a few are boys put in foster boarding homes by the court. Many are from families that, without their weekly pay, would be "on relief."

They earn while they go to school. Mr. Ford pays his students cash "scholarships." Each boy is awarded $6 a week when he enters, which is quite a wage for a tad of 13 or 14! This is increased to $24 a week as he progresses.

This isn't all. To encourage the predepression virtue of thrift, each boy is given $2 a month in addition to his scholarship. He can't spend this on ice cream cones or movies. He has to deposit it in some bank. Any bank he chooses. But he keeps his deposit book in the office at school, and some official inspects it to see that he saves. I saw those files of finger-smeared bankbooks, boxes and boxes of them. Often the youngsters had contrived to add a few pennies of their own and were accumulating pretty respectable savings.

Mr. Ford isn't going to have any undernourished boys in his school. So each noon a hot lunch is served them in the school, free. Altogether, the boys earn from a $375 yearly minimum to a $1,300 maximum wage.

Work for Returns.

This isn't just a gift. The boys work for it. They manufacture tools and do repair work for the Ford factory. They don't progress at shop work just to learn. They're always working to fill actual orders. Then the Ford factory pays for their products, as this school is not a part of the automobile plant; it's a separate corporation. It's amazing how little waste there is.

My eyes popped as I wandered through the school, which covers three acres of floor space, and saw youngsters at work at the most intricate jobs. Of course, they are supplied with superb machinery. But to see a lad in his midteens repairing a micrometer and performing operations which require accuracy to one-tenth of one-thousandth of an inch is, to this writer who can't draw a straight line with a ruler, nothing short of miraculous.

There are only three other similar schools in the world, I am told: one in England, one in Russia and one in India.

The boys aren't guaranteed jobs in the Ford plant when they finish. But only in the dark days of 1933 did any graduates who wanted to work there fail to find places.

They don't all want to, however. Some go to other companies. Some into other jobs, from running fruit stands to the ministry!

Million Dogwood Trees Atlanta's Aim in 1936

Atlanta, Ga. (AP). — Atlanta will have a million dogwood trees, and almost as many myrtles, by 1936.

Long-cherished plans by various garden clubs throughout the city have been combined into one gigantic project, including in its scope Fulton and DeKalb Counties, whereby every highway leading into Atlanta, every park and public ground, and most of the streets will be lined with the trees.

Mayor James L. Key is sponsoring the movement.
